WHERE THE JUNIATA SOFTLY FLOWS.

BY MONROE H. ROSENFELD.

There's a little home afar where the sweetest mem'ries are,
And I long to see the dear ones there!
By the stream I used to play while it sang upon its way
Down the quiet, sunny vale so fair.
But the brightest joy of all was at twilight's tranquil fall,
When the tuneful birds had sought repose;
Then my Mary I would meet, and my boyhood's love repeat,
Where the Juniata softly flows.

CHORUS.

In my dreams we linger still on the bridge beside the mill,
And her cheeks are like the sweet wild rose;
While the twinkling stars above seem to whisper only love,
Where the Juniata softly flows!

I have wandered far and wide over hill and mountain side,
But my heart will sigh for boyhood's days!
In the city's busy whirl still I think of one dear girl,
How I yearn upon her face to gaze!
We were parted in our youth, but I know the light of truth
In her faithful heart forever glows;
And her love is calling me back to scenes I long to see,
Where the Juniata softly flows!

FINETTA.

BY REX.

EVERY now and then London has a fit. Sometimes it takes the shape of hero worship, and down the mob go on their knees to some celebrity, male or female; at others it grows black in the face with hooting and mud slinging at some object which it has suddenly taken into its head to dislike.

At present all London—all fashionable male London—was in fits of admiration for Finetta, the charming, dark eyed orphan, daughter of a Whitechapel fish monger. A year ago she had sprung before the public on the boards of the Diadem as a wonderful dancer, and rapidly made her way into popular favor.

She lived now with her younger sister Polly in a pretty house in St. John's Wood, and, though the world said hard things of her, she was unjustly accused and calumniated. Her manners were not those of a grand lady. She gave supper parties, at which only gentlemen and ladies of the ballet were present; she talked and laughed loudly, cared nothing for the proprietors; was fond of champagne and enjoyed a cigarette; delighted in riding and driving tandem, and did both surprisingly well; but scandal could find no chink in her armor through which to shoot its poisoned darts, and the worst the world could with truth call her was "Finetta, the dancer."

The men who thronged 'round her called her "a good fellow," and when a woman of her class has earned that title depend upon it she is not so black as the virtuous paint her.

She knew half the peerage—the male side—but she was as friendly and pleasant to a struggling young journalist as to a lord. These sent her letters telling her they adored her. She lighted her cigarettes with them, and told the writers, when next she saw them, not to waste ink and paper upon her, but to make up a party to take her for a drive and a dinner in the suburbs.

Sometimes—very often—they sent her presents—diamond rings, bracelets, pendants, lockets, with their portraits (which she always took out), and she accepted them with a careless sang froid which was amusing—to all but the donors. The horses she and her groom rode were a gift from a well known turf lord. It was said that the lease of the house at St. John's Wood had been given to her; but that was not true.

"Why shouldn't I take 'em?" she said to her sister Polly. "They'd only give 'em to some one else, who wouldn't look half so well in them—wouldn't know how to ride 'em!"

So that she often danced at the Diadem, wearing gems which made the ladies in the stalls envious, and appeared in the Row riding a horse which was a better looking and better going one than Lady Harkaway's, the famous sportswoman.

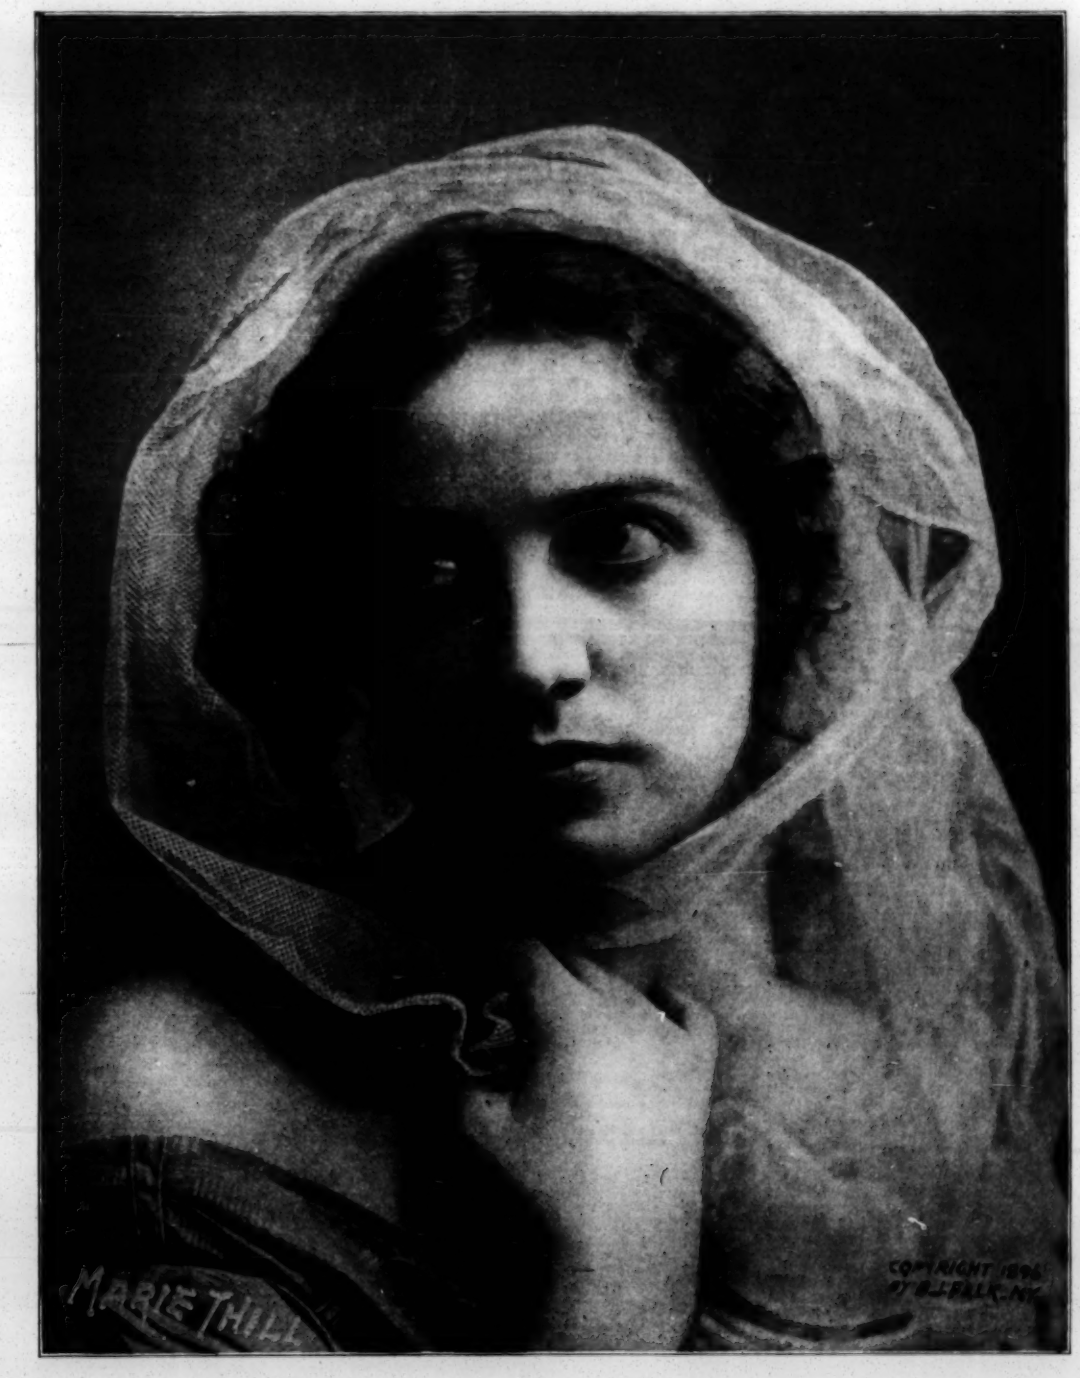
Sometimes one of the young men who paid her court fell in love with her—genuine, honest love—and offered to make her his wife. She might have been a countess had she chosen. But she did not choose.

"No, thank you," she said to one young man who implored her, with something like tears in his eyes, to marry him. "What would be the use? You'd find out that you'd made a mistake before a month was out, and so should I. Your people would cut me, and I shouldn't like that. Besides, you'd want me to give up dancing, and turn what you call 'respectable,' and I'm certain I shouldn't like that! No, you go and marry one of your own set, and take a box for my next benefit, and bring her, and you'll be able to say: 'See what you saved me from!' You wouldn't? Oh, yes, you would! I know your sort of people too well. You won't take an answer? Well, then, the truth is I've made up my mind not to marry till I come across a man I can really care for, and I'm not mashed on any one yet, thank you."

She knew the world very well, did Finetta.

She sent them away when they got "foolish," as she said, and wanted to marry her, dismissing them good temperedly enough. In fact, she was not a bad tempered woman, and it was only at times that her passionate nature revealed itself. At such times, when she set out, it was a revelation indeed. It was about as safe to brave a tigress in her den as to insult Finetta, and those who tried it once were satisfied with the attempt, and did not repeat it.

Now, one day, or rather one night, there came young Lord Yorke Auchester, and with him a change in the life of Finetta. They were friends at once. She amused and interested him; he liked to see her dance, liked to hear her talk in her cynical, cockney way; liked to drop in at the little house in St. John's Wood after the theatre, or the little suppers over which she presided with a light hearted gayety which made these extremely pleasant.



He admired her on horseback—admired her pluck, her coolness, her readiness to give and take in the game of repartee; and so it came about that of all the men none was so often in her company as Yorke.

We are the slaves of habit. This is by no means a new saying, but it is a painfully true one. Yorke got into the habit of dropping in at the Diadem for Finetta's great dance; got in the habit of dropping in at St. John's Wood, of riding with her in the park, or into the country, and although he never gave her presents, never told her that she was the most beautiful, the cleverest, the best of her sex, as some of the other men did, Finetta liked him better than all the rest put together. So the chain began to be forged.

When she went on the stage her dark eyes would search the stalls, and if she saw his handsome, careless face and long figure there a little smile would curve her lips, and she would dance her best.

At the little supper parties she managed, somehow or other, that he should sit beside her. If she were dull before he came, she brightened up when he made his appearance. If she had made an engagement she would break it if Yorke asked her to ride with him.

He didn't see this marked preference for a time, but the others did. The quiet little sister who ran the house once said:

"Fin, you're going soft on that big Lord Yorke," her "h's" when she was excited.

Nothing stands still in the world. Love grows or decreases. Finetta's love for Lord Yorke grew day by day, until it had reached such a pass that, when he went off fishing, during his absence she was wretched at heart, though outwardly as cool and defiant as usual.

One afternoon, as she was putting on her habit, her sister Polly had again ventured to say a few words of warning.

"That Lord Yorke will make your heart ache, Fin," she said, as she buttoned her sister's boots.

"Oh, will he?" Finetta retorted, with a dash of color coming into her cheeks.

"Yes, he will—and what's the good? He won't ask you to marry him!"

Oh, won't he? How do you know?"

"I've heard them talk about him. He's as poor as a rat."

"But I'm not!"

"No, I dare say; but that won't help you. Besides, he's as good as engaged to that Lady Dallas."

Finetta jerked her foot away, and her eyes began to glow dangerously.

"Her! Why, she's like a wax doll!"

"Oh, no, she isn't!" said Polly. "She's as good looking as most of the swells, and more so. Besides, she's rolling in money, and it's money he wants. Take my advice, Fin, and don't let him hang about you any longer."

"And you take my advice and hold your tongue!" retorted Finetta. "He shall hang about me as much as he likes! Who said I wanted to marry him, or—or that I would if he asked me?"

"I do, if he'd give you the chance," said Polly.

Finetta drew her foot away.

"I'll button the other myself," she said, passionately.

But when her sister had gone she sat with the other boot unbuttoned, and kept the groom and the horses waiting for a good half hour, and when she did go down and mount and rid eoff her handsome face was clouded and thoughtful. But at the sight of the green park and the people she chased the melancholy brooding out of her dark eyes, and, touching the handsome horse with her golden spur, sent him into the Row in her well known style.

"If he were only here!" she thought, and a sigh came to her lips. "Somehow, I feel tired and bored without him—even lost if he's away for a day or two. Going to marry Lady Eleanor, is he?"

Almost before the muttered words had left her lips her eyes fell upon the stalwart figure standing against the rail, and the color flew to her face as she brought the horse up beside him.

It was Yorke—Yorke leaning against the rail, his usually careless face grave and thoughtful, his eyes absent and staring vacantly at the ground, and yet with a strange look in them, which she, with a woman's quickness, noticed in an instant.

"Yorke," she said, bending down.

He started and looked up dreamily, and her name came to his lips, while he evidently made an effort to smile.

"Why, when did you come back?" she asked, her face, her eyes all alight with life and happiness.

"Today," he said. "Sultan's looking well."

"Where have you been?" she demanded, noticing a change in his voice. "Did you get any fishing?"

"Not much," he said; and his eyes were still fixed on the horse.

"No? Then why didn't you come back? It's been awfully slow without you. Why—what's the matter with you?" she broke off sharply, her color coming and going, for there had come into his face, into his eyes, a look of almost despair, which she could not understand.

"I'll come in after the the theatre tonight," he said. "Ride on now, or we shall have a crowd!"

Several men had stopped, but waited, as if recognizing Yorke's right to monopolize her.

"Very well," she said, and she turned the horse. "It has come at last," she murmured—"at last! He is going to be married. I know it—I know it!"

As she said this she cut she horse savagely with her whip, and he bounded away.

* * * * * * *

That evening, at the house in St. John's Wood, after the theatre, and when all the company had gone but Yorke, and Polly had retired from the little drawing room, Finetta drew an amber satin cushion from the sofa, and seated herself at the young man's feet, her hands clasped around her knees, her dark eyes turned up to him.

"At last we are alone," she said. "Now, Yorke, tell me everything."

"What do you mean?" he said. "How do you know there is anything to tell?"

She laughed almost contemptuously.

"How do you know when it's going to rain? By the clouds, don't you? Do you think I'm blind, Yorke? I'm not clever like some of your swell friends, but I'm not a fool. I've got eyes, like other women, and perhaps they're sharper than some. I can see something is the matter. I saw it the moment I rode up to you in the park today, and I've been watching you all the evening.

"You'd make a decent detective, Fin," he said, in a bantering way.

"I dare say," she assented, "most women would, especially if they knew the man they were after, as I know you."

"Yes, we are old friends, Fin," he said.

"That's it," she said, "and that's why I ask you what's the matter—what's happened. Some men would put me off or give me the lie, but you ain't like that, Yorke."

"Thanks," and he laughed.

"No, you always go straight, and that's one of the reasons why I—like you, don't you see?"

"I see," he said. "And so you thought I looked this morning as if I'd got something on my mind?"

She nodded.

"Yes; when I came up you were leaning against the rail, looking at nothing, as if you were dreaming. Don't tell me it's money matters, for I shouldn't believe you if you did. If the bailiffs were in the house you wouldn't let it trouble you, you know."

He laughed.

"I'm afraid I shouldn't," he admitted.

"Very well," she said, "then it isn't that—though you are hard up and pretty deep in debt, eh, Yorke?"

"Of course," he said. "Always have been, and shall be; everybody knows that."

"And so you're used to it, and don't mind it," she went on. "It isn't that, then. What is it?"

He was silent.

"You don't like to make a clean breast of it," she said, slowly, "and you think it like my cheek to ask you. But I am an old friend, ain't I? I'm only Finetta, the girl that dances at the Diadem, but I've got a feeling that I'm a better friend to you than many of your swell ones. I dare say they think I'm a bad lot, and that I've done you no end of harm. Perhaps I have. I've let you come here when you liked, and take me out riding when you ought to have been with them, but I don't know, after all, that I've hurt you very much. I dare say I could if I liked. You'd have given me things like the rest if I'd let you, but I didn't. I was a fool, perhaps—somtimes I think I am. But—but you see I liked you. I didn't care for the others; they were nothing to me, and it wouldn't have mattered if they'd spent their last shilling on rings and flowers and things. But with you it was different. I don't quite know why ——" her eyes sunk thoughtfully.

"Perhaps it was because you always treated me like a lady, and didn't bother me to run off with you or—or marry you."

Her voice softened and a dash of color came into her olive cheeks.

"You'd have made a poor bargain if I had, and you'd consented, Fin," he said, gravely.

"I dare say," she assented. "Anyhow, you didn't, and don't mean to. Don't deny it. I know how you always thought of me! I've been just Finetta of the Diadem, and it's been pleasant and amusing to take me about and come and have supper, and—and that's all." She raised her eyes to his face with a smile—a brave smile that did not hide her aching heart from him. "And we've been such very good friends," she went on, after a pause, "that I speak out straight and plain when I see that something is the matter, and ask you what it is. And if you'll take my advice you'll tell me. Who knows?—I might be able to help you if you want any help. Don't laugh. What's that story about the lion and the mouse? I'm only a mouse, I know, and you are no end of a lion, but you may find yourself in a net some day, don't you know."

Her tone was slangy, but there was an earnestness in it and in her dark eyes which touched Yorke.

He was silent for a moment or two; then he said, in a low voice:

"You're right, Fin; something has happened. I'm in a sort of net already."

"I knew it," she said, quietly.

"The fact is, Fin," he continued, almost in a whisper, as if it were very, very hard to screw up courage enough to say it, "I am—going to be married."

She did not start—did not move a muscle for a moment. Then she got up.

"Wait a minute. I want a cigarette."

She crossed the room to an inlaid cabinet and took out a silver box—of course, a present—and got a cigarette from it, and her hand shook so that for a moment she could not hold the match straight.

But when she glided back to her place at his feet her hand was steady, and, saving that her face was rather pale, she showed no sign of emotion, either of surprise, or anger, or resentment.

"Going to be married?" she said, leaning back. "To Lady Eleanor, I suppose?"

He nodded, with flushed face, and stammered:

"We—we are old friends, Fin, and I felt you ought to know."

"I see," she said. "It will make a difference to us, won't it? Good bye to our acquaintance now. No more rides together, no more suppers at the little house in St. John's Wood! It wouldn't do for a man who is going to be married to be friends with Finetta, eh? Oh, I understand, and I'm much obliged to you ——"

"Fin ——"

"Enough!" she interrupted, springing up suddenly. "Yorke, I wish you much happiness!" her voice trembled, in spite of her effort to control it—"and the wish comes from the bottom of my heart, Yorke!"

She held out her hand.

"Good bye, Yorke!"

"Fin!" he murmured, rising, "must we—must we part?"

He had grasped her hand.

"Fin, Fin, help me—I'm in the net. Be the little mouse. I don't love Lady Eleanor, you know—but her money ——" He stopped short, then burst out: "Oh, Fin, what a vile coward I've been! I—I ——" he almost sobbed, "can't say good bye! If I part from you—I—I—leave the only woman I ever loved!"

"Then I'll help you out!" she cried, in wild joy, sinking into his arms. "Get married, Yorke—get married! But to me—to me!"

He bent down quickly and kissed her over and over, and that sealed the contract.

MAY COOK.

This young California girl is widely known throughout the West as a singer and cornet soloist of much merit, having been for four years prominent as a soloist with some of the most famous military bands of that section. Coming East, she made her appearance on the vaudeville stage as a singer and cornettist, and, although practically unknown and unheralded, she immediately won success. Her simple manner, her evident earnestness, her tasteful dressing and her personal charms, combined with genuine ability and artistic taste as a musician, have captivated all who have seen and heard her. She is but nineteen years of age, yet, were it not for her modesty, she might well boast of her achievements, and look proudly toward a future that is full of promise. She is now playing the principal vaudeville houses, and is everywhere winning distinction.

FILSON AND ERROL'S new sketch, "A Modern Philanthropist," has been written by Will M. Cressey, of Cressey and Dayne, and not by Ed. "Captain Kidd, U. S. N.,"

An original burlesque, in two acts, by William Ernst Jr., was given its first professional production on May 1, at the Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., by E. E. Rice's company. It was originally produced by the Mask and Wig Club, of the University of Pennsylvania, at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, April 2. The story: Captain Kidd is ambitious to receive a commission in the navy of some great power, but before he can satisfy his ambition in this respect he feels in duty bound to find his lost treasure, which has been buried somewhere in a chest. After many unsuccessful searches he issues a proclamation to his followers, who are with him on his island, offering to whoever will discover the treasure the entire contents of the chest and the hand of Paquita, his daughter, in marriage. This offer does not meet with the approval of Paquita, who has resolved to wait until she meets the right man on whom to bestow herself, and she refuses the proposals of Jim Bloodso, Bill Cutlass, Redhand Pete and Archy Cross Tree, four of Kidd's followers. Hoax Ketchem, inventor of the airship Mercury, is out on a pleasure cruise with his two daughters, Phyllis and Ruth, Jack Halfback and Dick Tackle, two university students, but, the Mercury meeting with an accident, they are cast away upon the island. With Paquita and Jack it is love at first sight. However, Kidd informs the party that he always puts to death any one landing upon his island unless they can be of use to him, and, hearing of the airship, he gives Ketchem an hour in which to prove its wonderful powers, the alternative being death for all. Fortunately, before the hour is up William Penn, who has grown tired of standing on the public buildings in Philadelphia, floats upon the scene on a flying machine, and Kidd spares them. Penn tells Kidd of the wonderful treasures in Philadelphia, which leads him to believe that his treasure may also be there. Jack and Dick are anxious to return to their native city, so they confirm Kidd in his belief, and the entire party sets out for the City of Brotherly Love. Arrived there, Kidd has a generally good time and paints the town red. Jack and Paquita continue their love making, and Dick and Ketchem's daughter make the most of their opportunities in the same direction. William Penn is considerably puzzled by the change in the city. Kidd's principal followers have turned themselves into detectives in order to discover the hidden chest, and Jack arranges that they shall find one. When the chest is brought on by the discoverers and opened it is found to contain no silver and gold, but only a commission for Kidd as captain in the United States navy. The doughty captain is immensely pleased with this, and Paquita and Jack are made happy by the removal of all obstacles in their way. Marlowe; Bill Cutlass, Philip Ott; Redhand Pete, John Keefe; Archy Cross Tree, Matthew Ott; Hon. William Penn, George Honey; Hoax Ketchem, W. H. "Mr. Smooth,"

A new three act farce, written by Willie Collier, was given its first production on any stage at Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, N. J., April 17, by Mr. Collier and company. The story: Arthur Chilleigh is a retired banker, and lives in elegant style in New York City with his sister Angelian, his son Frank and daughter Rose. Joseph Patton, a cousin of Mr. Smooth, enters the Chilleigh home and assumes the name of Mr. Smooth, who is a son of the retired banker's dead business partner, and who had, as it was supposed, been suddenly called to Europe to settle an estate. The Chilleighs expect Mr. Smooth and give him a warm welcome. The old banker, willing to do anything for his old partner's son, lavishes good clothes, etc., on the pretender, who has been a spendthrift, is very heavily in debt, and comes to the house "broke." He possesses much of the slang and sayings of the race track and the club room. Frank and the banker concoct a scheme to make a match between him and Angelian, and a trip to Saratoga is made, where all the family stop at one of the first class hotels. Here it develops that Mr. Smooth and Rose are in love with each other, and Mr. Smooth confesses his deception to her, but she forgives him, and they agree to keep the secret until some favorable time. In the meantime the original Mr. Smooth has returned, and attempts to explain to the Chilleighs that he is the real Mr. Smooth, but the assumed Smooth declares him to be a lunatic, and he is forcibly put out. Mr. Hickey, a bookmaker at Saratoga, calls on Mr. Smooth and demands that he pay a little gambling debt of $900. He is introduced to Angelian by Smooth, and he talks her to, and finally takes her to the races, accompanied by her maid, Miss Langdon. Miss Vane, who is a cousin to Mr. Smooth, and who hails from Chicago, has called on Smooth, and Frank falls in love with her. In the meantime Frank and his father, ignorant of the love match, continue to pay Smooth's bills and permit him to purchase presents for her which the old man cheerfully pays for, and agrees to give Smooth an annuity if he will only take his daughter off his hands. In the last act the real Mr. Smooth arrives in the drawing room of the Chilleigh's with a determined air and declares that Joe Patton, his cousin, who stands near by, is the man who has impersonated him, and thus exposes him. Patton then explains all to the irate banker, and accuses the real Mr. Smooth of going to Europe to settle an estate of which not only the real Smooth but he (the pretender) and his cousin, Miss Vane, are equal heirs to. To this Mr. Smooth acknowledges and states that he has placed their share in the bank, and had only been waiting a chance to get in the house to explain it. General explanations then follow and all are forgiven. The play is splendidly mounted and proved a most laughable farce. The scenery is by Arthur Voegtlin, and the cast as follows: Mr. Smooth (Joseph Patton), Willie Collier; Cornelius Smooth, John Hyams; Arthur Chilleigh, John P. Ward; Frank Chilleigh, George W. Parsons; Mr. Hickey, Thomas Evans; George Debson, Thomas Garrick; Glib, H. L. Heckert; Dolt, Dan Mason; Rose Chilleigh, Helen Collier; Angelian Chilleigh, Maud Granger; Miss Langdon, Myrtle May; Vera Vane, Louise Allen-Collier.

"A Royal Prisoner,"

An original romantic comedy, in four acts, by True S. James, was given its initial production at the Bijou Opera House, Milwaukee, Wis., on Sunday, April 16, by Mr. James and company. The play is founded on Russian historical events during the reign of Elizabeth in 1741. The first act represents a fortress at St. Petersburg, in which is confined a young officer, Lieut. Alexis Razonmovski, and the Duke of Corin, claimant to the throne. The young officer, being an exceptionally fine fellow and an unimportant prisoner, is allowed a great many liberties by the governor of the fortress. The Duke of Corin manages to get a note to the young officer, and in it appeals to him for assistance. Shortly afterwards, through the governor's daughter, an opportunity to escape is offered the lieutenant, but he, being of an adventurous nature, decides to remain and allow his fellow prisoner to escape in his stead. Immediately after the imperial minister arrives with an order from her majesty for an interview with the duke, who is a distant cousin. The governor discovers the escape of the duke and confides his plight to the young lieutenant, who, to save the governor, decides to impersonate the duke; the empress not having seen him since childhood makes it an easy matter. He has the interview with the empress, who is much impressed with her supposed cousin, and has him removed to her palace. Here complications arise, for the lieutenant, who thinks the only way to get out of his present situation is to offend her majesty by making violent love to her, and consequently be banished again to his prison. But Elizabeth, contrary to his expectations, encourages him in his love making. Later, through the finding of a letter from the duke to the young officer, he is discovered and is about to meet the customary punishment for treason, which is death by the Empress' own hand. Elizabeth is about to deal the fatal blow when her love for the lieutenant prevails, and she bestows her hand upon him with the announcement that he shall be the first prince in the land, and henceforth capital punishment in Russia is abolished. The cast: Alexis Razoumovski, True S. James; Count Ivan Schonvakoff, Fredrick Bock; Major Vanka, James Jackson; Nicholas Kolski, Edwin Felix; Moloff, Edwin R. Price; Olaf, Oscar Randolph; Housloff, Charles A. Wardello; Sabel, Henry R. Gray; Marko, Samuel J. Wood; Thedora Vanka, Phebe Clark; Moderia, Florence I. Foster, and Elizabeth Petrovna, Empress of Russia, Jessaline Rogers.

MORTON AND REVELLE

Have been before the public as a sketch team for the past seven years, and in that time have maintained an enviable station in popular favor. The male member of the team, James J. Morton, is the originator of "rag time words," a prominent portion of their act, which is called "Left at the Post," an eccentric comedy sketch, in which Mr. Morton is ably assisted by his wife, Maude Revelle. They were one of the features with Hopkins' Trans-Oceanic Star Specialty Co. seasons of 1896-'97, 1897-98, under direction of Robert Fulgora, and received offers for the present season from Mr. Fulgora, Webber and Fields, "A Parlor Match," and several other companies, but preferred to play dates. They have been familiar figures at Pastor's, Keith's and Proctor's Theatres in New York, and have never failed to score a genuine hit. The act is original in every sense of the word, and deserving of the well merited success which they have here and elsewhere achieved. Mr. Morton's personality alone gives assurance of amusement, and his extempore style of humor never lacks appreciation. Miss Revelle is vivacious in manner, and an adept at grasping an opportunity to infuse a new laugh into an act already full of laughter. They are residents of Philadelphia, Pa., where they have a snug little home called "Rag Hall." They are booked solid for the remainder of the season, closing over the Orpheum circuit July 24, at Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Morton was born in Boston, Mass., Dec. 25, 1861, and made his professional debut at B. F. Keith's Bijou Musee, that city, in 1885, doing a black face monologue. Miss Revelle was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1865, and first appeared in public at Fox's Varieties, that city, in a song and dance turn. They were married in Altoona, Pa., May 3, 1891, and made their first appearance as a team in that city, April 7, 1892. Mr. Morton introduced "rag time words" with Hopkins' Trans-Oceanics, in Newark, N. J., in 1896, and the hit was so immediate that many others have followed his lead, until that style of comedy singing and talking has become generally prevalent in the varieties. Their success during the past few years has been remarkable, and they have now firmly entrenched themselves among the topping features of their profession, a station gained through Mr. Morton's unceasing diligence in originating and producing new material to keep their specialty invariably new, bright and refreshing.

HAWAIIAN ITEMS.

Notes from the Quaker Medicine Co.—We arrived in Honolulu by the Australia, after a pleasant voyage, and seemed transplanted to a paradise, as that is the impression this country makes on one after leaving the cold Winter of the States. It is not necessary for me to describe scenery, etc., as that was done through your columns by Ben Bruns, who wields an able pen, and who did full justice to it—suffice to say it is beautiful, and all that he painted it. We had a hard row to follow, as another show had just left, after doing good business and leaving a wonderful reputation. However, we opened up on their old lot, and after Dr. Bro. James Ferdon finished talking and offered our remedies for sale there was a rush, and it could not be handed out fast enough. It has continued so ever since, some nights selling our entire stock out in very few minutes, as fast as Dr. Ferdon and his assistants can hand it out. Harry Pollworth scored an immense hit with his juggling and slack wire, while Eddie Young and his black face musical stuff, assisted by Fred Lynch, have them screaming with laughter every night. We also have Eddie Armond with us, who is a general favorite here. It is conceded on all sides that Dr. Ferdon is the best talker that has ever been here, and thousands attend every night to hear his lecture and to see his marvelous cures. Our parade, consisting of horses, mules, carriages, and performers in uniform, with Dr. Ferdon in the finest carriage to be procured in the city (the one used by President Dole on state occasions), drawn by eight beautiful white horses, decorated with Hawaiian and American flags, was a hit. Ben Bruns is here in the capital on a vacation, and is fairly worshipped by the native element for his ability in singing their own songs. While the parade was passing the Iolani Palace he stepped out from the crowd, assisted by a crowd of youthful Hawaiians, and fairly loaded Dr. Ferdon's carriage with garlands of flowers and bouquets, amid the acclamations of the populace of "Aikani!" "Aikani!" which means friend. It had much to do in securing us a packed audience that night, and then, of course, Dr. Fercon and the Quaker Remedies did the rest; but it is pleasant to record one act of courtesy on behalf of the opposition, and, happening in a foreign country, and by one who is no mean talker himself, it is doubly appreciated. THE CLIPPER is here at James Dodd's large Pantheon, who caters to the profession and does all he can to make visiting theplans happy.

MARIE THILL

Was born in Lorraine, France, on Jan. 22, 1875, and first looked across the footlights in a stock company which played in Minneapolis, Minn. She was about seventeen years old at that time, and she continued to make Minneapolis her home, and the scene of her histrionic strivings, until four years ago, when she came to New York, and accepted an engagement with a company which was playing "Rosedale." She played a small part, and understudied the role of Sarah, remaining with the company only during its New York and Brooklyn engagements. Her first experience with a road company was with Charles Dickson, several seasons ago, and his plays of "Incog." and "A Jolly Good Fellow" both gave her fair opportunities for work in her chosen calling. It was while with this company, and in a curtain raiser entitled "Blind Love," that Miss Thill claims to have had a character that particularly appealed to her. The next engagement she played was with Mme. Modjeska, in the latter's New York and Brooklyn bookings of a couple of seasons ago. After that ill health kept her from the boards for some time, and she did nothing in the professional line until "Zaza" brought her again into active participation in things theatrical. In that play she portrayed the character of Lolotte on the opening night, and is still with the Garrick Theatre's wonderfully successful attraction. Miss Thill is intelligent, has an attractive stage presence, and is likely to acheive success in proportion to her opportunities.

— James J. Corbett was sued for $2,000 damages before Judge Fitzsimmons, in the City Court. Corbett was starring in "The Naval Cadet" during the season of 1897-98, and in Detroit, Mich., Orlando Battaglia, who was general stage manager, interrupted Corbett's lovemaking scene by tooting a horn at the wrong time. Battaglia declared that Corbett struck him and injured him internally. Counsel for Corbett showed by a number of witnesses that Battaglia had ruined the scene several times before this night, and that he had been reprimanded for blowing the horn at the wrong time, but to no avail. On the evening in question Corbett took Battaglia aside and seated him in a chair, and told him that he would not put up with such annoyance any more. He denied that he struck him at all. Corbett got the verdict.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

LONDON, Eng., April 22.

The production of "Robespierre," the drama written by Sardou for Sir Henry Irving, at the Lyceum, April 15, has naturally been the premier event of the past seven days, and the result may be summed up by saying that Sir Henry scored a distinct artistic success, and that the play, owing to its splendid mounting and stage management, gives every promise of proving a strong enough magnet to run for the major part of the season, if not until its close. The play is a splendid series of pictures of striking incidents in the life of Robespierre, some of them based on history and others purely imaginary, and while its story is not sufficiently strong to make a successful drama unaided by the wonderful aids and advantages of a Lyceum production, it is full of those touches which mark the master hand of Sardou's stagecraft and dramatic instinct. For a "fitted to order" effort it is a triumph, the great French dramatist having taken Sir Henry's measure well nigh to perfection, and provided him with several scenes in which his strongly developed characteristics are brought to a focus with splendid effect. While somewhat panoramic, the play is, however, so carefully written that the scenes are each finished pictures in their various ways, and Laurence Irving has turned it into terse and forceful English, and has apparently done ample justice to the spirit and letter of the original. As the first play ever written for the English stage by a prominent French dramatist, it derives additional interest, and there is a very genuine feeling of relief and pleasure felt in England that the venture has proved what can fairly be called a success.

As for Sir Henry's personal triumph on his reappearance, after his long period of enforced retirement consequent upon his illness, it was of so striking a nature that it will live forever in the traditions of the English stage. I have often mentioned the unique position which he holds in the affections of the English people at large, and of the loving reverence with which his fellow players in all branches of the histrionic profession regard him. The scene in the Lyceum last Saturday night when he first appeared was extraordinary, and no actor —no matter how great a popular idol, nor how inured to friendly plaudits—could have felt other than deep emotion at the spontaneous outburst of welcoming applause which fairly shook the theatre foundations. It was more than a welcome home again, so to speak, for it carried conviction of the pent up sympathies born of the rumors of his financial distress, and the relinquishment of his control of the playhouse he has made so famous. I need hardly add that in his speech after the conclusion of the play Sir Henry thoroughly voiced his understanding and appreciation of the demonstration.

The story as told by Sardou has been pretty well discounted in advance by detached paragraphs regarding the plot, and the "show" scores. In order to introduce some of the all important elements of human love into the play, Sardou has provided Robespierre with an illegitimate son, Olivier, whose mother, when the play opens, is Clarisse de Malercon, the wife of an aristocrat, and it is de Malercon whom the young man believes to be his father. Robespierre is just at the climax of his power, or rather just arrived at the point where political jealousy has begun to undermine it. Clarisse and Olivier have fallen into the hands of the committee of safety, the latter for his violent denunciations of Robespierre in the streets of Paris, and it is only when he is brought to be searched before the tyrant by the guards who have arrested him that certain papers and remarks reveal to the elder man that the younger one is his son, a discovery which he hides save from one of the trustiest of his personal followers. It is a fine scene, full of striking contrasts—the young man is brought before him in a private sitting room, where there are several pretty women engaged in the evening amusements of a well to do French family of the period—and Sir Henry's acting is exceptionally strong, the struggle to master his emotions, and to hide his natural affection for the young man who defies him, and scoffs at his efforts to make a friend of him, being very powerfully portrayed. Robespierre hears from him that his mother is also in custody, under an assumed name, and tries in vain to discover her whereabouts by questioning the son, but the latter only sees a plot to discover her identity, and make her suffer for his denunciations of the tyrant.

Robespierre has the prisons searched, however, and she is found in company with a niece, and they are taken to his rooms, facing one of the streets through which the tumbrills carrying the condemned to the scaffold pass. Here the one time lovers meet and learn that Olivier has been removed from the prison where Robespierre had sent him for safekeeping, by order of the Committee of Safety, who are now thoroughly jealous of his power. The young man's fate is unknown, and as each fresh batch of condemned prisoners destined for execution on that day are dragged by amid the hooting and imprecations of the people Robespierre and Clarisse eagerly scan their faces through the lattice of the window, dreading that their son may be among the victims. It is in this scene that Miss Terry—who is, of course, the Clarisse of the play—has her only opportunity worthy of mention. Of the great "show" scenes the fete of the Supreme Being, which I described in advance of the production, and the suicide of Robespierre in the Convention Hall, are both veritable triumphs of stage management in the way of handling crowds so as to give the impression of intense excitement and the tumult of an uncontrollable mob. The prison scene, in which the convicted aristocrats rehearse their coming executions, is also a splendid one and its realism is tremendously given. The cast is so very large, there being about seventy speaking roles, that individual comment cannot be indulged in, but it is worth a note as a small matter of stage history that Miss Terry did not know her lines, and at a number of points made the action of the play halt and stumble in a very awkward manner. The critics, with one accord, put it down to "nervousness," so far as their printed opinions go, while gossip attributes it to a disinclination on the part of the famous actress to overexert herself in the delineation of a part of comparative insignificance. She is said to have had the same feelings with regard to her part of Catharine, in "Peter the Great." During the week, however, Miss Terry's "nervousness" has disappeared, and she is now well in touch with a part which she most certainly adorns, whether it be worthy of her powers or not. Kyrle Bellew as Olivier is full of fire and he plays it with all the requisite nerve and manliness, the one flaw which a captious critic might carp at being that for so youthful a person as he is supposed to be there is a superabundance of waistline. It would be a very captious critic indeed who would find fault with that, however, in view of there being so much to praise.

The following letter, which was received from Sardou on the eve of the production, is worth reproducing here, and I may add that on the first night Sir Henry received, before the curtain went up, telegrams from the managements of well nigh every theatre in London wishing him and the play every success, while scores of similar messages came from the provincial managers, and from his personal friends who could not be present. This is Sardou's letter:

DEAR SIR HENRY—I had long hoped that the first performance of "Robespierre" would have taken place in May, when I should have had spare time that I have not now. My present occupations and my health, which is not all I could desire, prevent me from crossing the Channel today. I have written to Mr. Comyns Carr to express my regret that I shall not be there to hail your restoration to health and your dramatic genius, which, I know, is going to do so much for my play. I only hope the public will have as much pleasure in witnessing as I have had in writing this play for you. I should have wished to have provided Miss Terry with a part more worthy of her, and I beg her to accept my thanks for having undertaken to embellish this one. Be so good as to thank in my name Mr. Comyns Carr, who has comprehended and fallen in with my ideas as though we had collaborated all our lives, and your son Laurence, who has translated as a "confrere," that is to say, as one versed in theatrical matters; M. Jacobi, who has placed his gifts at the disposal of my play; and all your company; and as the overture strikes up, allow me, dear Sir Henry, to affectionately embrace you. V. SARDOU.

The recent incident at Her Majesty's Theatre which resulted in Mr. Tree requesting Mr. Jones to remain away from the rehearsals of the latter's play, "Carnac Sahib," was patched up, as I wrote you last week, but it has been seized upon by the newspapers as a theme worthy of development, and many managers and dramatists have been interviewed as to the rights of each side in the matter of presenting the play word for word as it is written. Some of the opinions quoted are of very considerable interest, and go to show that the two camps are not abnormally predisposed to let the dove of peace have the call over the eagle bird of war. Said W. S. Gilbert, the greatest of all sticklers for the "word for word as written" side of the case: "I have never had the unfortunate experience of being asked to delete or alter any words in my plays."—Gilbert writes plays as well as comic operas, let it be remembered—"and I cannot call to mind any similar dispute having occurred. I insist upon what I write being spoken, and at the same time I take care not to write anything that would be likely to offend the public. Of course I do not express any opinion upon the merits of this particular case of Mr. Tree and Mr. Jones, as I have not seen the lines referred to. If I were concerned in such a case as this I would appeal to the Licenser of Plays, whose duty it is to see that nothing occurs in a play which might offend the public taste."

George R. Sims said: "It is a very personal question, and so far as I can imagine can best be settled by mutual understanding and concession between author and manager. Have managers cut my play? Never, without permission, which I have always given freely. The more they have cut the better, for the piece does not keep people so long at the theatre. But no manager should cut a play without consulting the author." (Shakespeare in spiritland probably said "Hear! Hear!" to that) "and as a rule it is not done. If a manager thinks some lines should be deleted he is perfectly at liberty to make the suggestion, and, unless an author falls down and worships every line he has written, there should not be any friction. I am a man of genial temperament, and, after all, it is purely a question of the author's temperament and the author's manner."

When Mr. Sims' remarks appeared in type he was made to say, "it is purely a question of the author's temperament, and the manager's money," but he hastened to write and point out the error.

In the course of a rather long chat Sydney Grundy said: "I have known only one case similar to this in my twenty-seven years' experience, and that was settled without any dispute. It was in regard to myself and an actress. At the rehearsal of a certain piece it struck me that a couple of lines set for this lady ought to be stricken out. I struck them out, and from the expression of her face I came to the conclusion that she intended to restore them on the first night. She did restore the lines, and on the following morning I told her plainly what I thought of her. She did not repeat the lines, and there the matter ended. * * * I do not know of any field where there is so much scope for diplomacy as at rehearsals."

W. S. Penley said: "The manager has the absolute right to say what shall be in the play, seeing that he and not the author is responsible to the public for the play. If the play is not to the taste of the audience the manager is to blame, and therefore, with the manager must be the right of presenting the play in suitable form. It would be a nice thing if authors were to be allowed to dictate to the manager. But there are some authors who want the earth. If such a case arose before me I should say 'Outside,' because, as I tell you, I hold that I, as the manager, am responsible for what is presented. In the unfortunate difficulty which has arisen between Mr. Tree and Mr. Jones it is probable that the former did not fully estimate the quality of the lines in dispute at first reading. Now that he has had time and opportunity to judge of them accurately, he is, I think, fully entitled to exercise his discretion. The author wants everything, and I am bound to say that when the production is reviewed he gets his full share (Mr Jones got all the abuse when 'Carnac-Sahib' was reviewed), but when he wants to assume absolute authority then I say again, 'Outside.'"

Your correspondent thinks that Mr. Penley's remarks are common sense. In the case of the dispute over the disputed lines in "Carnac-Sahib" I hear that it was Lewis Waller who originally objected to the construction that might be placed upon them, and not Mr. Tree. Waller and Tree, as I have previously reported, play the roles of rival colonels in India at a military post where Colonel Carnac is in command. Colonel Syrett is officially second in importance. Both men are desperately in love with Olive Armiston, the seductive and very far from straight laced grass widow, so well acted by Mrs. Potter. Neither of them make any pretense of having a platonic or pure affection for her, for they are well aware that she has a husband in India. What they wish to win are what are politely known as "her favors," and "she keeps them guessing," to use a vulgarism, as to which will be the favored lover. Calling a spade a spade is the key note of the play, and it is a naughty enough theme to have won it a great box office success, and may do so yet.

Well, at one point, the two officers are quarreling over their rivalry, and Col. Carnac makes some boasting remark or other, to which Col. Syrett has to reply (or a remark to that effect, for the exact phraseology I cannot recall), "You may say what you please, but when it comes to deeds you will find that I have been before you."

In other words, Colonel Syrett boasts of having received the grass widow's favors, and, as he is portrayed in the play as an English officer and a gentleman, the speech is entirely out of keeping with the character. The speech was doubtless not intended to convey the impression it may easily do, for Colonel Syrett may contemplate various "deeds" of valor in order to win the grass widow's love, but it was a fair and a proper thing to protest against the lines as out of keeping with what a man of honor would say, even had he been successful in pressing his suit.

Bangs, Gertrude Perry, Edwin Holt and others made the best of their opportunities. The house was fair..... "Trelawney of the Wells" made an unquestioned hit at Powers'. The large audience received with great enthusiasm Pinero's clever play, interpreted with few flaws by Mary Mannering, George C. Boniface, Hilda Spong, Chas. Walcott, Mrs. Walcott and the others in the Lyceum Theatre Company.....At the Studebaker the Castle Square Opera Company gave a thoroughly good performance of "The Mikado," with the customary big business. Gertrude Quinlan made her first appearance with the company and reaped laurels as Pitty Sing. Henry Norman, Frank Moulan and Reginald Roberts were among the others who acquitted themselves well in prominent roles..... The Alice Nielsen Company began its return engagement in "The Fortune Teller" at the Columbia, to good houses..... "Coontown 400" came to the Great Northern, and the performers sang coon songs and danced buck and wing before a crowded house. Edna Alexander, Tom Brown, Kliest Brothers and a number of others caught the house. ..... "Sporting Life" began its twelfth and last week at McVicker's, to continued large houses. ..... "The Two Orphans" was well staged and acted at the Dearborn, and a large number of people enjoyed it. Julia Stuart made a pleasing impression as Louise, as did Emmett Corrigan as Pierre..... "Against the Tide" was the drama which, with a vaudeville bill, headed by Melville and Stetson, entertained crowds which filled Hopkins'..... Two "Uncle Tom's Cabin" shows demonstrated that this time honored piece has not lost its popularity. One was at the Adelphia, and Davis and Busby's held forth at the Academy. Another old drama, "East Lynne," was quite well patronized at the Alhambra, Ada Gray and Frederic Bryton taking leading roles..... "Prisoner of Algiers" was the bill at the Bijou, with Frank Linden featured. A fair business was done. .....The two vaudeville houses did well Sunday and Monday. The Streator Zouaves headed the Olympic, and Ezra Kendall was top liner at the Chicago Opera House..... Sam T. Jack's held on to the Bowery Burlesquers for another week, and the size of the houses showed that this was good judgment.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—There were plenty of theatregoers out last night, and the attractions all opened the week well. At the Broad "Alice in Wonderland" had a comfortably filled house, and, barring some slight uncertainty as to the lines, the performance went off well and it proved to be an entertaining trifle..... "Mlle. Fifi" attracted an audience which crowded the Chestnut Street Opera House, and the bright French farce made an unmistakable success, receiving applause and curtain calls galore..... The fiftieth local performance of "Way Down East," which was celebrated at the Chestnut Street Theatre last night, was witnessed by an audience of large size..... "In Gay Paree" opened its second week at the Walnut, to a crowded house..... A well filled house attended the performance of "The Ragged Cavalier," by Creston Clarke and Adelaide Prince, at the Park..... At the National an audience of good size was stirred by the performance of "Gettysburg."..... The stock company at Forepaugh's appeared in "The Little Detective," and had good attendance both afternoon and evening..... "The Sporting Duchess" duplicated its former success, a crowded audience growing enthusiastic..... An excellent programme at Keith's brought out the usual large opening attendance. ..... The Auditorium was well filled last night, and the programme arranged proved to be particularly entertaining..... The afternoon and evening performances by the Broadway Burlesquers, at the Lyceum, had their full share of patronage..... The Gay Morning Glories gave two performances at the Trocadero, to crowded business..... Large numbers enjoyed the many features at the museums..... The Forepaugh-Selis Brothers' Circus gave a big parade in the morning, and yesterday afternoon and evening gave exhibitions to enormous crowds.

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—Only three of the houses were open Sunday night in their regular season, and business was not very brisk at these. Two others have several "benefits" to run off, and will then close for the Summer..... At the Columbia Hopkins' Trans-Oceanics appeared for the third time in town this season and gave good satisfaction, though Miss Gassman was minus her piccaninnies, which, rumor has it, were kidnapped by her former manager just before the curtain went up..... At Havlin's a fair audience saw "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with the full equipment of bloodhounds, donkeys, etc..... The Standard is still in the ring with Fred Riders' Night Owls. Sunday matinee was cut off owing to the non-arrival of the company. Business opened well Sunday night..... At the Grand Manager Griffith was tendered a successful benefit Sunday, in the "Jilt." Minnie Radcliffe was cast for leading lady in place of Minnie Seligman. Monday night Hobart Bosworth had a benefit..... At the Imperial a benefit was given Minnie Seligman Monday night, the offering being "Forget Me Not."..... Ringling's Circus arrived Sunday noon, and the big tents were pitched at Grand and Laclede. Before they were fully up, however, the miniature cyclone of the afternoon blew them down, breaking several of the big poles and tearing the canvas badly. No casualties. The parade of Monday morning drew big crowds from the country. Monday evening's attendance was immense..... The first of the Summer gardens to open will be the Suburban, which opens May 14, with vaudeville and minstrels. Among those engaged are Carroll Johnson, Geo. Suily, Lew Sully, Tom Lewis and Geo. Wilson.

MILWAUKEE, May 9.—Robert Downing opened at the Alhambra Sunday. Large audiences were out, and were very enthusiastic over Mr. Downing in his new line of work. "The Commander" is a strong play, and will undoubtedly prove a winner. Stella Rees, Messrs. Dedeyn, J. W. Downing, Nugent, and Misses Gallick and Ronalle supported in an excellent manner..... At the Bijou Nance O'Neill opened her second week Sunday. Large houses were the rule. The drawing powers of this clever actress increase with each performance. McKee Rankin, Mr. Weaver and Mr. Gleason showed up especially well in the support..... At the Academy "The Butterflies," which the Thanhouser-Hatch Stock Company put on Monday night, afforded this splendid company many opportunities, each of the favorites being especially well cast. Riley C. Chamberlain and Julia Blanc made their first appearance and were received with great favor. Eugene Moore, in John Drew's old role, added much to his popularity. The staging, under direction of Frederick Paulding, was a feature.

BOSTON, May 9.—A decided paucity of patronage in general marked the opening of the week here yesterday, afternoon and evening, in the amusement line, and from the south to the northwest section of the show circuit such was the case along the line. The running bills for the week are: Tremont Theatre, "Prince Pro Tem;" Park Theatre, "The Turtle;" Hollis Street Theatre, Sothern, in "The King's Musketeer;" Boston Theatre, "The Three Dragoons;" Boston Museum, "The Christian;" Columbia Theatre, the Waite Comedy Co.; Grand Opera House, Geo. W. Wilson and company, in "The Social Outlaw;" Castle Square Theatre, "Cumberland '61;" Keith's Theatre, comedy and specialty; Bowdoin Square Theatre, "Outcasts of a Great City." The cheap price places felt the chill and made no splurge in the way of coining cash.

KANSAS CITY, May 9.—Sauer, the pianist, gave a recital at the Coates last night, to fair attendance..... Sunday, at the Grand, May Irwin, in "Kate Kip, Buyer," opened to a good matinee and had S. R. O. at night. She made her usual big hit and was ably supported by John Sparks, Ignacio Martinette and Robt. Lowe..... The Orpheum had a good matinee and big night house to see Clifford and Huth, McAvoy and May, and Florrie West..... The Auditorium had the usual packed Sunday house, where the Woodward Stock Company produced "Jim the Penman" in a clever manner. Jane Kennark, Wilson Enos and Willis Granger made distinct hits.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—An excellent house greeted Wilton Lackaye and his fine company, in "Charles O'Malley," at Rapley's National..... "The Wife," by the Frawley Company, at Luckett & Dwyer's Columbia Theatre, had a fine audience..... Williams & Walker's Company, in "A Lucky Coon," drew to the seating capacity of Rapley's Academy of Music..... Flynn's Big Sensation had two full houses at Kernan's Lyceum..... A good vaudeville bill at Grieves' Bijou, including Maestro Arras and Senorita Alice, Diana and others, played to two packed audiences.

TEXAS.

Houston.—The Broadway Theatre is doing excellent business. Ever since the house started putting on dramas and sensational plays business has been unexceptionally good. Johnson, George Ahmes, Charles Cross, Nettie Clinton, Leona Mendel and Cora Stickney. The rest of the people 1-6, were: Jake Coy, Dollie Wilson, Harry Clemmens, Lewis and Lake, Alice Arlington, Madaline Ray, Harry Lewis, Cora and Edna Johnson.

PALACE THEATRE.—Business continues uninterruptedly large. "French Ball" was put on 6, and elicited considerable merriment. Barrett, Lulu Lawton, Nicholson, female impersonator; Miss Duval, Rose Mendel, Miss Durrad, Annie Mack, James R. Hanlin and Harry Welch.

ED. BERGMAN, manager of Sweeney & Coombs' Opera House, will have his benefit 10.

Fort Worth.—At Greenwall's Opera House ex-Gov. Bob Taylor delivered his pleasing lecture, "Love, Laughter and Song," May 1, to a fair sized and thoroughly pleased audience. Mitchell Greenwall, treasurer of the Opera House, will be tendered a benefit 9, the Andrews Opera Co. being the attraction.

STANDARD.—Business continues good. People: Bert Swor, Wilma Sisters, Minnie Link, Amy Gilbert, Mlle. Lucille, Emma Barrett, Ethel Barlow and Trilby Fox, Maggie Lawler, and Frank Gibbons, stage director.

Others are: Duffy and Burton, Lillie Ellsworth, Lizzie Sullivan, Trixie Revere and Lulu Kent, Nellie Cooke, Daily Sisters, Katherine Cook, Charles Colburn, Vernon and Glass, Bertha Glenn, Mary Daily, Lillie Ranson and Flossie Bell.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—Business has suspended temporarily, due to a clash between the manager and the musicians. The following people, who were engaged at this house at the time it closed, are still in the city: Mike Seidel and Pearl Lamar, the Coopers, Jimmie Swor, Joe Crotty and Najib Tooma.

Galveston.—At the Grand Opera House the Aubrey Dramatic Co., at popular prices, closed a week's engagement, to good returns. The company also closed its season here, and several of its members left for New York and Chicago.

NIEMEYER'S MASCOT THEATRE.—The people week of May 1: Pearl Winans, Gussie Smith, Mel Reilly, Ethel Forrest, Florence B. Williams, John T. Chicks, Anna Chicks, Eddie Nelson, Carroll, Toledo Brothers and Hattie Carlton. The stock presented "The Black Detective." Business is good.

ST. CHARLES THEATRE.—The Stock Co. presented "Northern Lights," to a big business, 1-6, with Lavelle, mimic; Brown and Ferguson, as the specialists. Week of 8 the company will be seen in "The Golden Giant Mine," while the vaudeville will consist of Moreland, Thompson and Roberts, John Tierney, and Ramza and Arno. Carrie Lamont will be tendered a benefit 12, and a crowded house will surely greet the favorite little soubrette of the Hopkins' Stock Co.

WEST END.—This resort opened in a blaze of glory Sunday night, April 30, with a fine concert band, and the Faust Family as the vaudeville for next week. Artie Hall is underlined.

ATHLETIC PARK opens 14, with the T. P. Brooke Chicago Marine Band and high class vaudeville not yet announced. Mr. Hunt, the agent, is looking after Athletic Park's interest.

LEW KEOGH, comedian of the St. Charles Stock Co., was tendered a testimonial last week, and was greeted by a house packed to the doors..... "The Striped Petticoat" was presented during the week by local talent, and drew fair crowds. The piece is by local authors.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington.—The second of our playhouses closed its season with the end of last week—the Grand Opera House, under the management of Burke & Chase, who, having demonstrated that vaudeville for lady audiences could be made successful in Washington, now retire in the full tide of success, to again open in the Fall in what will be practically a new house, as arrangements have been made for a complete renovation and refurnishing during the Summer. This leaves but five of our theatres open for the present week, but the first week in June will probably see all closed save one, which will be ample to accommodate all who desire to be amused in town. The suburban resorts, of which several are in contemplation, will get the lion's share of patronage.

RAPLEY'S NATIONAL THEATRE presents this week Wilton Lackaye, in "Charles O'Malley." "Trelawney of the Wells" had excellent business last week. The only underline at this house at present announced is that of a single appearance of Maude Adams, in "Romeo and Juliet," June 1.

LUCKETT & DWYER'S COLUMBIA THEATRE.—The sixth week of the Frawley Co. is current and "The Wife" is the bill. "All the Comforts of Home," last week, was played to well filled houses and entire satisfaction. "Sweet Lavender" 15-20.

RAPLEY'S ACADEMY OF MUSIC has Williams and Walker and company in "A Lucky Coon" this week. Last week Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" played to excellent business. No underline for 15-20.

BURKE & CHASE'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE closed a very satisfactory vaudeville season May 6, and will reopen for the week of 22 to accommodate the crowds which are expected in Washington during the Peace Jubilee, which occurs 23-25. The house will then remain closed till Sept. 11, when it will open for the season of 1899-1900, under the same management and policy which have made it so successful during the past season.

KERNAN'S LYCEUM THEATRE.—Flynn's Big Sensation Co. is competing for the public favor this week. Last week Rose Sydell's London Belles, featuring Karina, in a very risque disrobing sensation, did good business. Broadway Burlesquers 15-20.

GRIEVES' BIJOU THEATRE.—The bill at this house this week includes: Arras and Alice, Merrill and Newhouse, Barry Thompson and Annie Carter, Walz and Ardelle, Brannan and Collins, Diana and the Bijou stock. Business continues excellent.

THE PEACE JUBILEE, for which extensive preparations have been going on for the past two or three months, promises to be a most brilliant affair. Three days of parades, pageants and pyrotechnic displays, 23-25, will undoubtedly attract thousands of visiting strangers.

They are both in the best of health, and expect to work well into the Summer before resting. Next season will open about Sept. 1; they having only a few weeks open. The demand has been so great in the States that they will postpone their trip to England. Miss Irwin has in preparation a farce comedy, by one of our best authors, entitled "The Jolly Miss Kidder," which she will no doubt produce season 1900-1901. TOMMY DONNELLY'S BIG MINSTRELS NOTES: We started the ball rolling in Thomaston, Ct., May 6, when we opened our fourth regular Summer season. The company has been rehearsing in Thomaston Thursday and Friday, 4, 5, and gave a torchlight procession Friday evening. Our boys made a great showing in their street parade uniforms—long dusters and white alpine hats. Long before the hour of opening the crowd began to assemble around the Opera House, and by 7.30 in the evening the house was filled to the doors. The performance was a success both financially and artistically, and we were not slow in getting a return date from Manager Gotsell. The singing, which is under the direction of George Reeves, proved one of the features. C. H. Dobbs, known through his connection as leader of the orchestra at the Collingwood Opera House, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., fills the same capacity with this company. The cake walk by the whole company was new to Thomaston folks, and was accorded several encores. Our afterpiece, "A Trip to the Klondyke," was greeted with shouts of laughter. Our genial manager, Jas. R. Rieder, who is well known through his many years' connection with Al. G. Field's Minstrels, has left nothing undone to make every one comfortable and pleasant. Our pilot, Matt Nasher, who has everything his own way ahead of the show, is renewing old acquaintances in all the towns ahead where the company has previously appeared. He is treating the boys to a sort of novelty in making our jumps by team instead of railroad, and we had our first taste of it in our first jump from Thomaston to Litchfield, a distance of twelve miles. Roster: Tommy Donnelly, George Nassell, George Reeves, Mominee, Paul Lalonde, Walter Hyde, Tommy Hyde, Billie Patton, Leds Fairman, Werner Althaus, Chas. Bragg, Chas. McCarthy, C. H. Dobbs, and Karl Kolb, drum major, and Mike Raie. Jas. R. Reider is manager and Matt Nasher general representative.

NOTES FROM THE ERN. G. ESTEY MONSTER DOUBLE MINSTRELS.—This, our first season, opened at St. Albans, Vt., two weeks before Christmas. Poor business was the rule, and it was uphill work until 1898 had passed. But business came with the new year, and if we haven't got rich we have left a good and lasting name behind us that will harvest a good crop next season. Roster: Ern. G. Estey, sole proprietor; Wm. H. Wallace, manager; Billie Woods, advance agent; E Fred Croto, programmer; Frank L. Gardner, stage manager; Prof. F. G. Stone, leader of orchestra; Prof. Ed. Wild, leader of white band; Prof. Eddie Pierce, leader of colored band; Sam Actain, A. C. Brown, Ed. C. Skinner, A. C. Pusey, Geo. C. Wilson, W. F. Whiton, Jim Johnson, Harry A. Brown, Percy Guy, Ed. Brown, Frank White, E. P. Johnson, Al Johnson, Geo. Grant, Kid Woods, I. Stone, Frank C. Willis, Bob Raynolds, E. G. Emerson, Archie Tylor, Billie Gardner, West and West, Louis Powers, Bob Collins, Sam Prescott, Ali Eadie, Mrs. Geo. Grant, Mrs. A. E. Johnson, Mrs. Geo. Wilson, Ada Cool, Mrs. Harry Brown and Baby Roland Reed Estey. Our season will close at St. Johns, Can., May 12.

AL. REEVES informs us that he put a vaudeville company together to play two dates contracted for May 4, at Asbury Park, N. J., and May 5, at Red Bank, N. J. He did a big business at Red Bank and packed them to the doors at Asbury Park. The show consisted of the American Quartet, Juno Salmo, Mitchell and Cain, Carmenelli and Lucille, Fannie Thatcher, the Mannings, the Charmon Sisters, Frances Smythe and Al. Reeves. Wm. Mitchell rehearsed and put on an old time minstrel first part, which made a decided hit. Mr. Reeves also states he will open next season in August, at Chicago, having under contract now the following people: Inez Mecucker, the American Quartet, Mitchell and Cain, Fannie Thatcher, Hedrix and Prescott, Celeste and Bayless, Julia Elwood, and a chorus of twelve women. The colored people so far engaged are: James Crosby, assisted by Charlie Cl

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.—There is little change in the aspect of theatrical affairs: the steady decline of interest continues, bringing with it a lessening of attendance at most of the houses and the final closing for the Summer of three houses on Saturday night. Were it not for two important events towards the end of this month, namely: the engagement of Olga Nethersole at the Broad, and the appearance of Maude Adams, in "Romeo and Juliet," at the Chestnut Street Opera House, the regular season would be considered practically closed at the present time, and when these two events are past the season will come to a sharp end. However, two of the current offerings are new to the local public, so the theatregoers have little excuse for entirely neglecting the theatres.

BROAD STREET THEATRE.—As intimated in last week's telegraphic news, "Captain Kidd, U. S. N.," was not a success at this house. When produced by amateurs the personal equation assisted largely in carrying the burlesque on to success, but a single week's rehearsals, which, it is understood, was all that was allowed for last week's performances, is scarcely enough for a professional production of this kind, and consequently there was a dead level of dullness throughout, little relieved by some entertaining specialties. Business was fair throughout the week and the management wisely concluded to close on Saturday night. "Alice in Wonderland," which was to have been given for a few performances at the Chestnut Street Opera House, will play the entire week at this house. Three matinees will be given, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The only future attraction announced is the engagement of Olga Nethersole, beginning 29.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE.—Local theatregoers have their first opportunity this week of seeing "Mlle. Fifi," which is the attraction at this house. Rose Coghlan, Louise Beaudet, Grace George, Pearl Evelynn, Aubrey Boucicault, John T. Sullivan, Thos. H. Burns and E. Lovat Fraser are concerned in the production, the cast being the same as seen in New York. The same attraction will probably be continued for three weeks, until the opening of Maude Adams, in "Romeo and Juliet," on Monday, 29. Kellar was greeted by well filled houses last week.

CHESTNUT STREET THEATRE.—The opening performance this week of "'Way Down East" is celebrated as the fiftieth performance here, this calculation no doubt including the previous engagement, and very tasteful onyx inkstands are distributed to the ladies attending. The attendance continues remarkably good, and next Monday begins the fifth week of the current engagement.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE.—There can be no doubt of the success, from a financial point of view, of "In Gay Paree," which opened at this house last week, though the expressions of opinion heard have not been as favorable to it as to the previous Casino productions. A long and clever cast does its work well, but it must be said that this "musical farce" appeals more to the eye than to the ear or intelligence. The same attraction is continued.

PARK THEATRE.—This week, which is the sixth for Creston Clarke and Adelaide Prince at this house, ends the season for both the company and the house. The plays to be presented are "The Ragged Cavalier" on Monday and Thursday evenings, and Thursday and Saturday matinees, and for the other performances "The Bells." The performances of "The Last of His Race," in which drama both stars have appeared here before, were attended by good sized houses last week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—The season at this house came to an end with the Saturday evening performance. "Adonis," which was the last attraction, did not draw heavily, and, as business has been dropping off considerably, it was deemed wiser to close than keep up a losing fight. Manager Southwell is still in the West with the Southwell Opera Co. The future of the house is not yet known.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—For the current week this house has the spectacular production of Frank G. Campbell's "Gettysburg." "The Prodigal Daughter" was the offering last week, presented by a worthy cast, and fair patronage was bestowed. Next week, Paul Gilmore, in "The Musketeers."

FOREPAUGH'S THEATRE.—Another of Lotta's successes is given this week, George Learock, Carrie Radcliffe and other members of the stock company appearing in "The Little Detective." The warm weather appears to have no terrors for the patrons of this house, for they attended in large numbers last week, and were enthusiastic in praise of the production of "Under the City Lamps." The announcement for next week is a revival of "Jane Eyre."

GIRARD AVENUE THEATRE.—Owing to the former success of "The Sporting Duchess" at this house it is revived this week by the stock company. The cast is the same as in the previous production, with the exception of Walter Edwards and Kate Dalglish, who appear as Lord and Lady Desborough. "The Charity Ball" was well played by the stock last week, each member doing his or her work well, and the excellent performances were witnessed by audiences of large size. Next week "Virginius" is to be produced by Walter Edwards and the other members of the company, and the week following, which is the last of the season, brings a revival of "Carmen."

STANDARD THEATRE.—At this house the Summer season for the stock company is inaugurated this week with a production of "The New Arabian Nights." Well filled houses attended the performances last week and the patrons were well pleased with the production of "Faust." Fanny McIntyre has severed her connection with the company.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—Black Patti's Troubadours did a fair business at this house last week and the performance on Saturday night brought the season of the house to a close.

KEITH'S.—As has been often stated before, there is no wane to the season at this popular house, which keeps in running order all the year 'round, and which has no lack of patronage even in the warm months of Summer. Last week business continued good, and for this week a splendid list has been prepared for the delectation of the patrons. Heading the list are Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar, in "Dr. Chauncey's Visit," and following come George Henry Trader and company, in "Oscar's Birthday;" Yorke and Adams, Harding and Ah Sid, Three Polos, Conway and Leland, Frobel and Ruge, Vilona Sisters, Elizabeth Murray, Hayes and Bandy, Mlle. Olive, Ellsworth and Burt, Mudge and Morton, Gilbert Sarony, the biograph and the stereopticon.

AUDITORIUM.—Manager Gilmore announces the beginning of his annual vaudeville festival, when he will present vaudeville bills containing many special features. The bill for this week includes Flo Irwin and Walter Hawley, in "The Gay Miss Con;" Jess Dandy, Gallando, Duffy, Sawtelle and Duffy, the Deltorellis, Kenno and Welch, Masse, Raymond and West, and Frederick Bond and company, in "Her Last Rehearsal." Williams & Walker's Co. was largely patronized last week. Next week, Gotthold's Gigantic Gathering of Specially Selected Celebrities.

ELEVENTH STREET OPERA HOUSE.—Powell, magician, closed his engagement on last Saturday night, after a fair week's business, and the house is now dark for the Summer.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—The Burlesquers, who entertain the patrons this week, present "Monte Carlo" and "A Naughty Night's Doings," and an olio including Smith and Cook, Le Clair and Leslie, Bennett and Rich, Mitchell Sisters, Merritt and Razalla, and Dave Lewis. Plenty of encouragement was given the Sporty Widows last week. Next week, Bon Ton Burlesquers.

TROCADERO.—Manager Lauman is in line to please his patrons this week by presenting the Gay Morning Glories, which broke the record for large receipts at this house when its first engagement was played, earlier in the season. There was large patronage last week, when Irwin Brothers' Big Burlesquers entertained the patrons in excellent style. Next week, Rose Sydell's London Belles.

NINTH AND ARCH MUSEUM.—The good attendance continues at this house, and there should be no drop this week, in view of the many interesting features provided. In the curio hall are Hans Dohlen, German Samson; Mlle. Ardell, contortionist; Prof. Morella, magician; Sig. Baloris, human salamander, and the Georgia Minstrels. In the theatre the farce, "The German Justice," is presented by a cast headed by Larry Tooley; following this come May Kennedy, Boydell and Boydell, Ed. Chrissie, Two American Belles, Penn Trio, Spencer Brothers and the cineograph.

NOTES.—The Forepaugh-Sells Brothers' Circus has grounds at Twenty-ninth Street and Columbia Avenue, where the many features are exhibited all this week. The big parade is given on Monday morning, and there is little doubt but that a splendid week's business will be done.....It is announced that William Postance, late stage manager for Olga Nethersole, will direct the performance of "Alice in Wonderland," on the stage of the Broad this week.....Leslie Fancourt is in the cast of "Alice in Wonderland," playing the part which he created in the original London production. .....Heinrich Conreid, of the Irving Place Theatre, New York, delivered a lecture at Houston Hall last night, in German, and using the German stage as a topic.....The old suit brought against Walter Damrosch by Walter Bacon to recover $1,785 commission for arranging, as was alleged, four performances of German opera in 1894, was called up in court last week. A verdict for the defendant by agreement was taken, the case having been settled out of court.....The Battle of Manila," the cyclorama at Broad and Cherry Streets, was opened on May 1, according to schedule, and has been a revelation to those who have viewed it during the week. The work of preparing the production was begun on April 15, and Manager Hartman and Artist Salvador Mege are deserving of praise for the rapidity with which they have done their work, and for its marvelous effectiveness. The spectator stands on the deck of the Olympia steaming into Manila Bay at sunrise, and amid the booming of cannon and shrill bugle calls sees the harbor and surrounding islands, and the Spanish and American fleets in the thick of the fight. The effects are splendidly managed and an interesting lecture delivered, while one of Admiral Dewey's gun captains is on hand to answer any questions. The Cyclorama Company has taken a two years' lease of the building.

Pittsburg.—Last week was a very dull one in things theatrical, and the present one will be still duller, as all our theatres save two have closed their doors for the Summer.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager Davis' admirable dramatic stock company is giving an elaborate production of "The Butterflies." "The Lost Paradise" was excellently given last week and attracted a host of patrons. This week's specialists include Caron and Herbert, Cooke and Clinton, Williams and Tucker, Edward Reynard, Belmont and Weston and Annie Wilkes. "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" will be produced 15.

ALVIN THEATRE.—This house closed the regular season 6. Manager Charles L. Davis proudly exhibited a statement of the box office receipts for the entire season, which showed the profits to have been about $50,000, a very great excess over any preceding year. There is a strong probability that Manager Davis may have absolute and sole control of the house next season. The house will be reopened 15, 16, for the first production on any stage of Thomas Whitney Surrette's opera of "Cassabel," which is to be produced under the direction of the Daughters of the American Revolution. After that there is to be a season of Summer opera by the Jaxon Opera Co., commencing 22, which will be continued so long as it proves successful. Francis Wilson closed a profitable engagement 6.

HARRY WILLIAMS' ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The White Crook Burlesquers is presenting the burletta, "A Parisian Night." The Big Sensation Co. created a big sensation all last week.

BIJOU THEATRE.—After a prosperous and highly exciting reign of one week "The King of the Opium Ring" abdicated May 6. Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co. begins 8. Robert B. Mantell will present "The Corsican Brothers" 15.

NOTES.—Hon. William J. Diehl, mayor of this city, was the Pittsburg correspondent of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER some thirty years ago, when your present correspondent was a little chap in knickerbockers and roundabouts.....Francis wilson administered a well deserved rebuke from the stage of the Alvin to those patrons who want to hurry out during the finale of an opera, and thereby destroy the pleasure of those who desire to hear it.....The Bijou gives matinees every day this week, to accommodate the patrons of A. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co.....Manager Harry Davis has introduced immense electric fans, which keep the Grand Opera House patrons as cool as cucumbers these hot nights.....Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co. makes a daily street parade, which is one of the handsomest ever seen here, a noteworthy feature being Tom Brookman, a colored youth, who, it is said, stands eight feet in his stockings..... Stage Manager J. C. Huffman, of the Grand Opera House, is in New York, selecting the play for the last week of the season.....The many friends of Mart W. Hanley, manager of Robert Mantell, are preparing a warm welcome for him when he comes here next week..... There will be only four more weeks of the regular season at the Grand Opera House. .....Some of our local newspaper critics were profuse in their advice to Francis Wilson, while he was playing at the Alvin last week, "To make Lulu Glaser keep in her place".....Mayme Jester, the young woman press agent of Buffalo Bill's Wild West, which shows here 15, 16, is in town, and is doing splendid work for her attraction..... La Pearl's Circus is exhibiting in nearby towns, and giving great satisfaction. It will show at Carnegie 8.

Harrisburg.—Cool evenings had a gratifying effect on business last week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Teresa Carreno had a fair house May 1. "A Day and Night," 5, did well, and the European Sensation closed the week 6, to good business. The Miles Ideal Stock Co. will make its first appearance here week of 8, and will close a season of nearly two years in this city 13.

NOTES.—Nat Leroy and Minnie Woodford, formerly known as the Leroys, with the European Sensation Co., were warmly greeted by their many friends in this city. They have introduced a new act, which is proving the feature of the show..... Nathan Appell, of the amusement firm of Markley & Appell, is confined to his room with an attack of asthma.....W. C. Elmendorf, of the Miles Ideal Stock Co., will, at the close of the present season, resume his place with the Grotte Trio, which includes Paul Brady and Master Dick Walters..... Mrs. F. M. Gibbons is visiting a short time with her husband, of the European Sensation Co..... Mrs. George H. Turner, wife of Manager Turner, of the European Sensation Co. has returned to her home in Jersey City.....Emil Bleiman has joined the European Sensation Co. as musical director. .....H. A. Mann, with his forces, was here 7-8, with advertising car No. 3 of the Forepaugh-Sells Bros.' aggregation.....Duncan Harrison, of theatrical fame, is an officer of the Ninth Immune Regiment at Camp Meade. He is major of the first battalion and is exceedingly popular with his men He has had a hard siege of it in Cuba, and after he is mustered out, 25, will, with his wife, who is now here, go to Maine with the hope of recovering his shattered health. He says he will never return to the theatrical business. His friends in military circles say his bravery and good work in Cuba will secure him a fine berth in military circles when he has recovered his health. Members of the European Sensation Co. and Miles Ideal Stock Co. called on him and were given an interesting account of the campaign in Cuba by Mr. Harrison. The Belmonts are giving exhibitions in this city..... Manager Engle, of the Danville Opera House, and Mr. Brookes, of Danville, were in the city 7, 8.

Erie.—At the Park Opera House the Houghton Stock Co. was favored with large attendance during five days of last week, at cheap admission. Richard Mansfield, in "Cyrano de Bergerac," played to a large house, the prices of seats being greatly advanced. Erie has been favored with a fine line of entertainment during the past season, at advanced prices, and all attractions have drawn packed houses. Mr. Mansfield, being the last, suffered somewhat by reason of the very high scale of prices. Miss Judson, of this city, joined the Richard Mansfield Co. here.

Lancaster.—At the Fulton Opera House, Mitchell's All Star Players presented various dramas, to fair business, May 1-6. The season is rapidly drawing to a close.....Forepaugh-Sells Bros. Circus, 16.

Altoona.—At the Eleventh Avenue Opera House Lester Walter's Stock Co. remained over May 1, 2, to fair business. The house is now closed.

— John F. Leonard's "Two Jolly Rovers" will be under the direction of Thos. R. Perry next season.

OHIO.

Cincinnati.—Theatrical folks refuse to take very much stock in the tale that another temple to Thespis is to be built on Government Square. That is the hint given by James Neill, whose retirement from the Pike Opera House is responsible for a big Spring muss in the local world of amusement. It seems unfortunate that the contract with the Neill Stock Co. should expire with so much agony on tap in public places. There have been charges and counter charges of the sharpest personal character. Mr. Neill says that he and Edythe Chapman will be seen in Cincinnati at the head of another stock company next season and at a new theatre. With Robinson's and the Star closed, and the old Vine Street looking for a tenant, that story looks dream like, but Mr. Neill says he has the requisite backing. The semi-official announcement has been made that Herschel Mayall, Lila Vane, Joseph B. Everham, Charles Wyngate and Fred. Butler have already been secured for the Pike Stock Co. of 1899-1900. Manager Hunt doesn't seem worried over the outlook, and will spend the Summer in the East. Just before the week ended there was a new angle to the situation, and it was said that Mr. Neill is after Robinson's Opera House.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—The Forrest-Davis "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co. will open May 8, for a week of 10-20-30 business. The regular season closed 6. The engagement of Alice Nielsen in "The Fortune Teller" proved to be one of the most memorable of the year. Both star and opera pleased, and despite weather almost torrid the engagement was not only successful from an artistic angle but from a box office point of view.

FOUNTAIN SQUARE THEATRE.—The season closed 6, after thirty-five weeks, with the figures on the right side of the ledger. Down town vaudeville was an experiment that paid from the start. G. H. Hartford and George Schoettle will be the beneficiaries at an entertainment 7. The volunteers include James Cullen, Grapewin and Chance, Bessie Lamb, Ethel Levy, Edna Aug. Eddy Evans, Hayes, Hegg and Williams, and Foster and Williams.

HEUCK'S OPERA HOUSE.—When the curtain fell 6 on the last act of "A Queen for a Day" the season ended. The Earlscott Opera Co., recruited in Cincinnati, will play a Summer engagement in Atlantic City. The juvenile artists include Pettie Earlscott, Alma Betscher, Edna De Mar, Alma Meyers. Elfride Henke, Lores Grimm, Milton Hollander and Hewitt Burnett. Friends of the little people turned out in goodly numbers and there were flowers and plaudits for nearly all of them.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—The season closed 6, when Fred Rider's New Night Owls made its final appearance after a week of hot weather business.

HECK'S WONDER WORLD AND THEATRE.—Grace Mazelle, Melnotte and Bob Matthews provided the turns in the auditorium. Grace Cummins, Edgar Hoffheimer, Sam and Joe Bloom, and Victor Leist were also heard.

MUSIC HALL.—The illness of Sembrich disappointed many lovers of music. The Boston Festival Orchestra appeared, 2, however, with Sara Anderson, Miss Towle, Miss Lohbiller, Sig. Campinari, Mr. Shirley and M. W. Whitney Jr. as soloists. Business rather bad.

Manager D. H. Hunt, of the Pike Opera House, is in New York.

Cleveland.—Vaudeville is now the rage in this city and at each house it is the bill. The query is, will it last? The latest rumor credits Managers Drew and Campbell with negotiating for the use of the Opera House during the Summer season, and, while the Star Theatre is undergoing repairs, of running a line of high class vaudeville entertainments. The house is unusually adapted to warm weather productions, having an ice cellar through which cold air under pressure is forced into the house. In addition to this house the Lyceum is presenting a vaudeville bill, as will also Haltnorth's Garden Theatre and Euclid Beach Park, when these two Summer resorts are opened in a few days, so that from the present outlook all our Summer amusements will have vaudeville as their strong feature.

OPERA HOUSE.—Richard Mansfield, in "Cyrano de Bergerac," May 4-6, from a business standpoint, was pre-eminently a success: perhaps also it can be said that artistically and dramatically the performance was everything to be wished for, with the exception of a lack of feeling, which latter Mr. Mansfield apparently was not enabled to infuse into his audiences. At least, there was not that hearty response with which our Cleveland people are wont to receive stars of his magnitude. The exceedingly large company was thoroughly appreciated. Standing room was at a premium at each performance. The benefit of Treasurer Coan and Officer Hicks, of this house, was a thorough success, and netted the beneficiaries a handsome sum. Part of the benefit was in favor of the Police Pension Fund. Week of 8 James O'Neill will be seen, in "The Musketeers. "The Runaway Girl" 15-17, May Irwin 18-20.

CLEVELAND THEATRE.—"Coon Hollow," a melodrama depicting Southern life, was fairly well received week of 1. "Lost in New York" 8-10, Al. W. Martin's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" 15 and week.

The bill was as follows: Guilbert, equilibrist; Dorothy Drew, Seely and West, musical comedians; Clayton Sisters, Flo Irwin, in a sketch, entitled "The Gay Miss Con;" Bessie Bonehill, Duffy, Sawtelle and Duffy. The Roeber-Crane Vaudeville and Athletic Co. 8 and week, Royal Burlesquers 15 and week.

LYCEUM.—The strong bill presented at this house week of 1 gave further evidence that Manager Hennessey was on the lookout for the very best attractions, and catered to our people with the best fruits from the vaudeville market. George Wilson, the top liner, made his usual hit. The Merkel Sisters, in one of the most artistic and graceful acrobatic turns, captured the house at every performance, doing a sensational act that was quite wonderful. The others on the bill were: Wood and Shepard, Hooker and Davis, Solaret, Adelina Roattino, Grant and Grant, and Filson and Errol. In addition Chas. Holstein, a Clevelander, made his debut as violin soloist. For week of 8 the bill is: Henry Lee, Arthur Deming, Frencelli and Lewis, the De Foreests, Maude Beall Price Romallo Brothers, acrobats; Berry and Hughes, musical comedians.

Sam H. Thompson, a well known passenger agent, Missouri Pacific, and an Elk, and well known in theatrical circles, died and was buried in Cleveland the past week.

Dayton.—At the Grand Opera House the local lodge of Elks entertained their friends May 1 with their annual minstrel show. The first part was strictly local, but the olio was composed of some pleasing numbers. Dan Thompson, who for years was with Joseph Murphy, conducted the rehearsals and took a prominent part. Nora Winters, assisted by her father, Banks Winters, gave a very pleasing sketch, and made the hit of the show. Prof. Malina gave some pleasing feats in magic. The performance concluded with a fine collection of moving pictures, shown on the biograph. Dan Godfrey's Royal British Band gave two concerts 3, to large and well pleased audiences. The sale for Richard Mansfield, in "Cyrano de Bergerac," is unusually large. Boys were in line three days before the sale opened, holding places for purchasers. Ozob, specialist, comes 7.

PARK THEATRE.—The house was dark 1-3, but opened with a burlesque company 4-6, to good business. This is the last attraction at this house for the season.

NOTES.—La Pearl's Circus gave two performances 2, to big business. The show is considerably larger than when last seen here. The menagerie was increased some while in Dayton by the arrival of three baby lions. They were born during the morning parade. At last reports mother and babes were doing well. In honor of the occasion the cubs were named "Dayton.".....At Fair Grounds Buffalo Bill is announced for 10.....At Fairview Park "Dewey's Victory" has been attended by thousands of people the past week. RHODE ISLAND.

Providence.—Last week was a pretty good one at the theatres. At the Providence Opera House Julia Arthur appeared in repertory and had a pretty good week's business. The local press was rather severe on her plays, in fact, more so than they should have been. She was certainly good and had a fairly good company supporting her. For the present week there are to be two attractions, the first half of the week Nat C. Goodwin and Maxine Elliot appearing in "Nathan Hale" and "The Lady and the Cowboy." The advance sale is very large and everything points to good business. For the rest of the week, "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush," with J. H. Stoddart as Lachlan Campbell. On the following week Chauncey Olcott will appear here. Maude Adams will appear here May 25, for one performance only, and will present "Romeo and Juliet."

KEITH'S NEW THEATRE.—Last week there was as good a show as has been seen at this house for a long time. There was not a poor act in the whole bill, and the business was good. There were some holdovers this week, and some new people added, which should go to make up a bill fully as good as last week. The bill includes the Four Cohans, in "Money to Burn;" Hughey Dougherty, Watson and Hutchings, assisted by Ed. Edwards, the Eddy Family, acrobats; A. O. Duncan, ventriloquist; Herbert's Performing Dogs, Barton and Ashley, Knight Bros., the American biograph, Lillian Durham, Tom Hefron, Lawrence Crane and Coulson Sisters.

WESTMINSTER THEATRE.—Last week there was a colored show at this house. It was Tom McIntosh's Show, and was a pretty good one. There was a whole lot of good singing and dancing and cake walking, and a good attendance at every performance. For this week the management offers the London Gaiety Girls, and this is the first time here in two years. On the week to follow Moulin Rouge is to be the attraction.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"The Three Dragoons" held the fort here, to fair business, last week and will remain during the present week. Week of May 15 Julia Arthur will appear in her impersonation of Juliet.

BOSTON MUSEUM.—And still Glory Quayle charms us in "The Christian." This is the seventh week of the play, and the demand for seats is still in advance of the supply. The play has proven one of the most successful ever presented at this place since the days of Moses Kimball, and would, no doubt, run for many weeks to come with profit to the house.

TREMONT THEATRE.—R. A. Barnet and L. S. Thompson's "Prince Pro Tem" is the bill announced here for the opening of the Summer season. It is promised with a good cast and a gorgeous staging. Last week, "A Runaway Girl."

Louis Nethersole, business manager for his sister, is very enthusiastic over the play, and promises that Miss Nethersole will give us something that will eclipse all her former productions.....The Elks of Milwaukee are arranging to attend the St. Louis meeting in June, 150 strong. They are after the 1900 meeting, and are working hard to secure $25,000, in order to entertain the Grand Lodge.....Contrary to expectations, "Sporting Life" will be seen in Milwaukee this season. It opens for a week at the Davidson, with the original New York cast.....Irving Brooks, one of the popular members of the Thanhouser-Hatch Stock Co., leaves for Atlanta, Ga., May 6, to join Mr. Hatch and the other company. He has made hosts of friends here, who deeply regret his going. The Kneisel Quartet plays at the Pabst Monday, 8.

Eau Claire.—The National Theatre Co. occupied the house week of April 24 and had fair business. William Owen, in "The Three Guardsmen," delighted a large audience May 2. Otis Skinner is due 8.....An informal reception was given William Owen by Manager Burlingame at the close of the performance evening of 2. Mr. Owen's many friends here note with pleasure his increasing popularity and success.

MISSOURI.

St. Louis.—Two more houses are closed this week, leaving but three out of the seven in operation. The first of the Summer theatres will open about May 15.

OLYMPIA.—James O'Neill, in "The Musketeers," did a fair business last week. It was the last week of the season for the house. In Mr. O'Neill's support were: Edmund Collier, Francis Carlyle, S. Miller Kent, Andrew Robson, Jacques Kruger, Hallet Thompson, Frank J. Keenan, Edmund Breese, Henry Herman, Blanche Bates, Nora O'Brien, Roselle Knott and Adelaide Manola. The play was extremely well staged, and earlier in the season a big business would have been done.

GRAND.—The stock company, under the management of Mr. Giffin, ended its work 6. This week sees several days of "benefits," however. Last week's bill was "In Mizzoura," and Miss Seligman, Miss Scott, Hobart Bosworth and John Maher carried parts with their accustomed skill. The season has not been especially profitable, although Manager Giffin has offered to the public one of the strongest stock companies in the country. There is many a traveling company playing to standard prices that in balance and support is decidedly inferior to the Grand Stock Company. That more money has not been made was mostly due to the difficulty experienced in starting in as they did in the middle of the season with a completely new company and a decided change in the policy of the house.

COLUMBIA.—Last week's bill seemed to please the people, for attendance was very fair. The features offered were: The Streator Zouaves, Montgomery and Stone, the Raymond Trio, Fred Niblo, Kherns and Cole, the Franklin Sisters, and the Columbia Comedy Co. This week Hopkins' Trans-Oceanic Vaudeville Co. is here, including Kora, Josephine Gassman, Waterbury Bros. and Tenny, Wilson and Leicester, Charlie Case, Polk and Hallins, and the La Paige Sisters. This house has had a very successful season under the management of Salisbury and Tate. Probably the house has entertained more people the past season than any theatre in town. The policy of the house will be vaudeville again next season, and with no competition in that line another successful season seems assured.

HAVLIN'S.—All kinds of fights, smash-ups, explosions and Wild West incidents accompanied the production of the "Denver Express." The cast was of no especial ability, but the sensationalism is what the patrons of the house crave. This week "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is here, under the management of John F. Stowe. The house has played cheap combinations, at cheap prices, and with little expenses of management in its house force has probably turned the account on the right side of the ledger.

STANDARD.—The European Sensation Burlesquers did a very good business last week. Junetta Paree, in "An Affair of Honor," was featured. The attraction had little merit, although some of the vaudeville features in the olio were very good. This week Fred Rider's New Night Owls are here.

NEWS.—The Kneisel Quartet, of Boston, gave a concert at Union Club Hall, 4-6, which was well attended.....Mr. Spaulding, proprietor of the Olympic and Century Theatres, returned to New York April 30, after a week's visit to settle up the season's business with Manager Short.....William Weil, the bandmaster, has closed a contract with Mr. Short for twenty Sunday afternoons next season for his popular concerts. Mr. Weil met with unqualified success at his concerts last season at the Fourteenth Street.....The benefits at the Grand this week include Sunday afternoons and evenings' performance of "The Jill" for the benefit of Manager Giffin; "The Lottery of Love," Monday evening, for the benefit of Hobart Bosworth, and "A Bachelor's Romance" Tuesday, for John B. Maher and Grayce Scott. ...Carl Schillinger, one of the oldest of the theatrical musicians here, died last week, at the age of sixty-seven. He was employed at the Grand.....Della Fox, who has been visiting her father, M. A. J. Fox, in St. Louis, for the past ten days, has returned to New York. Miss Fox suffered from a severe cold and a turned ankle, which has troubled her for several months. She will not play this Summer, but recuperate at one of the Eastern Summer resorts.....Marie Leicester, of the vaudeville team of Wilson and Leicester, playing this week at the Columbia, is a St. Louis girl whose real name is Marguerite Pattison. She has had a thorough training in music at both home and abroad, and has worked hard for several seasons with several light opera companies. For a year and a half she has been in vaudeville. The problem of the Grand for next season remains unanswered. The Tri-Sate Amusement Co. announces that the policy of the house will be stock, but the manager and members of the company are unknown. With the Imperial withdrawn from the field, playing combinations, the prospects for a successful season are very bright. The present stock company is very acceptable, and if continued here would undoubtedly make money for next season. Most of them, however, are under contract to Mr. Giffin, and he announces that he is undecided as to his whereabouts for next season. The public would welcome the return of the whole force..... William Beck and several other prominent men in the Orpheum vaudeville circuit were in town Friday and Saturday, 5-6. They were on their way from the West to Chicago and stopped to pay their respects to local theatrical men. The Columbia is in the Orpheum circuit, and the visitors spent some time at that house with Major Tote. They also took short trips to the Summer gardens.....Major Salisbury, of the Columbia, has been in town for the past week.

Kansas City.—At the Coates Opera House Charles Frohman's clever company, in "On and Off," came May 3, to fair attendance. The show proved one of the best of the season. E. M. Holland, Fritz Williams, Ralph Delmore and Elsie Tittle all did splendid work. On 4 locals gave a minstrel show for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. A good performance was given, the features of which were feats of magic by Don Turley, the coon singing of Sam S. Oakford, and the rag time playing of E. Harry Kelly, introduced in a musical farce, all of which earned encore after encore. On 5, 6, for the first time on any stage, "The Secret of Sable Island," written by Will Denmon (local), was produced by an amateur company, headed by Lucile Dyer. The play is of the conventional society melodrama sort, but with rewriting might be made a go professionally. Lucile Dyer, in the leading role, was good. The bits of the performance was made by James S. Wood-, Frank E. Lott and Jack Woods, in character roles. The house was packed at both performances, Miss Dyer having solicited subscriptions to the amount of $1,600. The house will be dark until 19, 20, when Richard Mansfield will give us "Cyrano de Bergerac."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Last week "The Turtle" opened to big Sunday business, and had good houses the rest of the week. The local press gave the same roast the show has received in other cities, so consequently the audiences were composed mostly of the sterner sex. The company is very clever and gave an artistic performance. Isabelle Evesson, Ida Deanes, Jennie Reifarth, Marion Tallan, Signor Pereguin, Geo. Holland and Hudson Liston were all excellent. This week May Irwin, in "Kate Kip Buyer," which had its premier here last season, will close her season as well as the season at this theatre.

ORPHEUM.—Felix Morris, in "The Vagabond" and "Percy Pendragon," delighted the audience last week. Foster Lardner and Rachael Brothers lent valuable support. The Pantzer brothers, in their head balancing act, gave excellent satisfaction. Polk and Kollins, banjoists, were accorded their usual reception, and played different orchestrations in their clever style. Waterbury Brothers and Tenny had a good musical act and played better than the average musical teams. The comedy introduced is somewhat different from the ordinary in that line. Maud Meredith, a singing comedienne, sang old and new songs with effect. Lester and Stevens, eccentric acrobats and dancers, opened the show and put everybody in a good humor. Baby Moore, a local discovery of Manager Lehman, sang sentimental and coon songs, and Prince Satsuma gave a good exhibition of Oriental juggling and balancing. This week's bill is a strong one, and includes: Clifford and Huth, McAvoy and May, the Gypsy Quartet, Manning and Weston, Florrie West, Fred Niblo, the Three Franklin Sisters and De Boe.

AUDITORIUM.—Last week "Trilby" was produced, and it proved one of the most popular bills the Woodward Stock Co. has put on. Jane Kennard, in the title role, was excellent. Wilson Enos, Wm. Granger, Jas. Fulton, and the rest of the company all deserve special mention. The production is a great credit to Manager Woodward. This week, "Jim the Penman."

CLIPPERINGS.—Prof Gentry's Dog and Pony Show was here all last week, to big business. The show has a brand new canvas. An excellent performance is given. The street parade is a feature..... The Bruno-Steindel Co. gave a concert at the Auditorium on the afternoon of 4, to fair attendance.....Lemen Brothers' Circus opened its season at Argentine 6, to big business..... Mabel Hite closed with "The Late Mr. Early" Co. at East Liverpool, O., last week, and was in the city for a few days, leaving for Chicago, where she will go into vaudeville.....Martin Beck and J. J. Rosenthal called on Manager Lehman last week in regard to Orpheum business.....J. C. Miron joined the Smalley Comedy Co. last week.....The Zoo is doing a big business, but will soon close to go on the road.

St. Joseph.—Tootle's Theatre was dark last week and nothing is booked until May 23, when the Bostonions come for one night.

CRAWFORD'S THEATRE.—The Klimt-Hearn Co. opened its second week 1, to big business, which continued the entire week. Lew Sully, in his specialty, was the hit of the show and he proved a great drawing card. The house will be dark week of 8.

WAGNER'S WONDERLAND.—A strong bill was given last week, but the warm weather had its effect and the returns were only fair. The bill for week of 7 includes: Felice, Geo. Jones, and Mooney and O'Brien on Bijou stage, and Lew Hall's Minstrels in auditorium.

STANDARD HALL.—"Chiquita," the midget, is drawing big crowds this week.

CANADA.

Montreal.—The tail end of the season is rapidly approaching here, and taken altogether it has not been so very satisfactory. With the "Bells of Shandon" the Queen's closed, and in future this house will be used solely for local affairs. Her Majesty's has a few good things booked, and during week of May 29 "The Grandee," an opera by local people, music by Prof. Jules Hone, libretto by Capt. Forsyth, will be produced, the leading roles being interpreted by New York professionals. The date of closing the Francais and Royal is not announced.

ACADEMY.—Howard Gould and a fair company presented "The Prisoner of Zenda" 1-6. With a three nights' engagement of "Pudd'nhead Wilson," 11-13, this theatre closes its season.

FRANCAIS.—Ouida's "Moths" offered a splendid chance, and which was taken advantage of, to Charlotte Deane and Messrs. McGrane and Townsend to show their ability. The other members of the stock were acceptable. The comedian of the company, Harry Rich, gave an excellent turn on the vaudeville bill, the others in that line being Mr. and Mrs. Barry and Georgie Lingard. "My Partner" 8-13.

ROYAL.—The Royal Burlesquers were here for week of 1, Australian Beauties 8.

SOHMER PARK.—The Summer season opened 7, with Mayo Sisters, Gregory and Durrell, James and Richards, German Rose, Mabel Arnold, Florence Gray, Deslauriers, and Girard and the band.

Toronto.—All the theatres are suffering from the effects of warm weather and bicycling, with the exception of the Grand Opera House.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Richard Mansfield, in "Cyrano de Bergerac," played to magnificent business, and packed the house at each performance, May 1, 2. The leading supporting roles were taken by Catherine Gray, as Roxane, and Wm. Courtney, as Christian. The staging and scenic effects were good, and the performance left a favorable impression here. The house was dark 3-6.

TORONTO OPERA HOUSE.—Alma Chester, in "Hermine, or the Cross of Gold," put up a fairly good show, to light business, 1-6. The bill for week of 8 is "Tennessee's Pardner."

PRINCESS THEATRE.—"The Two Orphans," by the stock company, was given a pleasing performance and up to the standard of the work done by the company before. Helen Byron, as Louise, met with approval and was given a warm reception. "The Private Secretary" will be put on week of 8.

THE BIJOU put up a capital bill 1-6, to good business. The burlesque, "Robin Hood Jr.," was given and the olio included: Marie Sousa, Camille-Leroy-Stafford, Conroy and McCoy, Howard Sisters, Farrell and Starck, Alice E. Fitzgibbons, the Great Wieland, and concluded with "Casey's Hotel."

THE EMPIRE put up a good vaudeville bill to nice business 1-6. The bill opened with a sketch called "My Niece." Following were: Zella Clayton, the Kelleys, Lillian Melbourne, Babe Riel, Fanny Granger, Mulley and Vonder, and concluding with burlesque, "A Mormon."

St. John.—At the Opera House the Edwin Maynard Co. opened the second week of its engagement May 1, in "The Dark Side of London," to a good house. Coming: "The Victoria Cross" 8-10, Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co. 11-13.

NOTES.—Jennie Cline, of the Edwin Maynard Co., while playing in Calais, Me., April 20, was taken seriously ill with pneumonia, and had to be left there under the care of two doctors and a nurse. She has recuperated enough, however, to reach this city in charge of a nurse, and will rejoin the company soon.....Alfred Beverley, of the same company, while playing here last week was taken dangerously ill with pneumonia, and was taken to the hospital 30. There are doubts as to his recovery..... .H. Percy Hill will put out a new comedy next season, called "Two Fools Met," but he will continue to manage the Edwin Maynard Co.

Winnipeg.—At the Winnipeg "McFadden's Row of Flats" played to a very good house April 26. Clay Clement came 28, 29, and played to two large houses, giving the very best of satisfaction. Stuart Robson opened a two nights' engagement May 2, at advanced prices, and was greeted with a large house. Primrose & Dockstader come 9, 10. .....The Grand Opera House is dark.

Galt.—At Scott's Opera House George Heath, assisted by Marie St. John and repertory company, played the week of May 1, to excellent business and well pleased audiences, having produced "Lynwood," "Our Strategists," "Caste" and "The Russian Serf," the latter with local military assistance. This company has been engaged to play a benefit 12 for attaches of the Opera House.

Berlin.—At the Berlin Opera House L. W. Washburn was booked for May 4, but did not materialize, consequently the house was dark. Jas. Rowling Dramatic Co. is booked for week commencing 8.

MAINE.

Portland.—At the Jefferson Theatre the Wilbur Opera Co. held the boards May 1-6, and did a big business. The operas sung were "The Mascot," "Fra Diavolo," "The Royal Middy," "The Grand Duchess," "The Circus Clown" and "The Merry War." Matinees were given daily. Popular prices prevailed. This company holds over for week of 8.

CORTLAND THEATRE.—This house had Fred Rider's Moulin Rouge Extravaganza Co. as an attraction 1-3, and two matinees, each performance receiving a good patronage. Katie Rooney, in "The Girl from Ireland," came 4-6, with matinees Friday and Saturday. Business very good. Coming: Week of 8, the American biograph.

CITY HALL THEATRE.—A local production put on by Bosworth Post, G. A. R., entitled "Cinderella," drew two excellent houses May 1.

NEW YORK CITY.

Review and Comment.—The events of the past week were neither numerous nor important, although some of them were not lacking in interest. The one novelty presented was an extravaganza of some merit, but poorly staged. The opening of the BROADWAY THEATRE, May 1, under the new management of Jacob Litt, and with a fine revival of "Shenandoah" as the feature, was an event of considerable interest. Occurring, as it did, upon Dewey Day, and with the house liberally and handsomely decorated with the national colors, it was a timely and attractive production, and did much to win favor for the new management. Later in the week De Wolf Hopper's presentation of "The Charlatan," at the FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE, afforded pleasant entertainment, further reference to which will be found elsewhere in this issue. When, at the dawn of the current season, Mr. Hopper first presented his work to a metropolitan audience the intensely warm weather occasioned much discomfort. Between the acts almost the entire audience fled to the sidewalks for relief from the intolerable heat, and at no time were his auditors in an appreciative mood. The work consequently made a less favorable impression than was anticipated, and reaped less of commendation than was its due, and consequently this later visit has been wisely made. The weather during the past week has been very variable. At the beginning of the week record breaking heat was experienced, culminating in a severe thunder storm, which brought even more relief than was desired, for before the week closed overcoats and furs were again in use. There was a considerable falling off in the total amount of business done in the theatres, although a few of the favorite attractions suffered not at all. Nevertheless it was made apparent that another spell of hot weather would result in the closing of many houses.....A vaudeville performance for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America, which was given at the BROADWAY THEATRE on Sunday evening, April 30, was by no means a financial success. In recognition of the charitable work of this noble organization, done within the ranks of vaudeville performers, it had been desired by the promoters of the benefit, and expected by them, that this would be one of the most notable benefits ever given to the Fund. That nothing should be lacking to procure such result, there was created a worthy and efficient committee of arrangements, which included among its members the proprietors and managers of five of the leading local vaudeville houses and several prominent agents. Many leading performers volunteered to furnish entertainment, and a good bill resulted; but, unfortunately, the public failed to display interest either in the performance or its purpose, and the receipts were lamentably small. This result should be greatly deplored, and it is pertinent to seek its cause. While the selection of Sunday as the time for the performance was unfortunate, the reasons for the choice of date are too obvious to need mention, and are, moreover, quite defensible. The chief error seems to have been over confidence on the part of the managers of the enterprise, and the magnifying of the entertainment offered at the expense of the object which it was intended to serve. When a performance is given in aid of the charity fund of a fraternal organization the members of the order forming the lodge directly interested sell the tickets through personal solicitation, making their most effective appeal, not through the promise of entertainment, but in the name of Charity and on its behalf. The result of such effort always far exceeds that attained by the most liberal advertising, and even though it occasionally causes "the despoiling of the Egyptians," such levy has never been considered to be other than just. There is probably no more generous class than that which embraces members of the amusement profession, and in this respect the vaudeville branch compares most favorably with the dramatic, but its charity is apt to be the result of impulse caused by the sudden arousing of sympathy rather than the outcome of carefully considered and predetermined purpose. The Actors' Fund of America is an organization that should appeal strongly to every vaudeville performer. Its charitable ministrations are not confined to its own membership, nor to any preferred class in the profession, but are granted to all who are in any way connected with the providing of amusement, actors, performers, managers, agents, singers, minstrels, circus people and house attaches, even including those in comparatively menial positions. During the fiscal year ending June 7, 1898, eight hundred and eight applications were favorably acted upon, yet of this number only thirty-three were members of the Actors' Fund, only a trifle more than four per cent. of the whole number, and statistics of the Fund, for a number of years, prove that vaudeville performers have formed a very large percentage of the total number of beneficiaries. In view of these facts, in connection with the comparative failure of the recent benefit performance, we feel that the vaudeville branch of the profession would glean honor by seeking to aid in a more systematic manner than ever before the work of this noble charity. The first step in this direction should be individual application for membership in the Fund, and the payment of two dollars annual dues, not with the hope of personal gain hereafter, but as a voluntary contribution towards an organized charity that stands ready to assist your unfortunate brothers, the knowledge of whose misfortunes might not reach you in their hour of trial. In this connection it is well to quote the following clause, which appears upon each application blank:

"I sign this application with the full understanding that the Actors' Fund is a CHARITY, not a benefit society, and that the payment of two dollars yearly for membership gives the right to use the Fund Rooms, to vote and take part in the annual meetings, etc., but does NOT CONFER ANY PECUNIARY RIGHT, nor constitute a claim of any kind."

Sordid motives are thus precluded, and every member of the Fund is entitled to that self satisfaction, or inward approval, that comes from the performance of a good deed in a worthy cause. Still further service can be rendered the Fund, not only as volunteer entertainers at its benefit performances, of which service there has been no lack, but in efforts to enlist public sympathy in the cause to be benefitted, and thus increasing the pecuniary results. We have referred to this matter without any solicitation, or even suggestion, upon the part of the Fund, and have been impelled thereto through a desire that our host of friends in the vaudeville profession may derive the honor that will accrue, individually and collectively, from the hearty recognition and practical encouragement of a most worthy charity..... The continued attractions for the week ending May 6 were: "Zaza" at the GARRICK, Julia Marlow at the KNICKERBOCKER, "The Cuckoo" at WALLACK'S, "Because She Loved Him So" at the MADISON SQUARE, "The Man in the Moon" at the NEW YORK, "The Arabian Girl and Forty Thieves" at the HERALD SQUARE, "The Great Ruby" at DALY'S, "A Reign of Error" at the VICTORIA, "Lord and Lady Algy" at the EMPIRE, James K. Hackett at the LYCEUM, "The Purple Lady" at the BIJOU, "The Old Homestead" at the ACADEMY OF MUSIC, and the Castle Square Opera Co. at the AMERICAN, the five last named having closed upon that date....The one week stands closing May 6 were: "An American Hero" at the PEOPLE'S, "The White Heather" at the STAR, "A Female Drummer" at the GRAND OPERA HOUSE, Andrew Mack at the HARLEM OPERA HOUSE, "Yon Yonson" at the COLUMBUS, and "By the Sad Sea Waves" at the MANHATTAN.....Variety entertainment was furnished at TONY PASTOR'S, PROCTOR'S, the UNION SQUARE, the PLEASURE PALACE, KOSTER & BIAL'S, the LONDON, the TROCADERO, the OLYMPIC, HURTIG & SEAMON'S, and MINER'S BOWERY and EIGHTH AVENUE.....Performances in Hebrew were given at the THALIA and WINDSOR..... Adolf von Sonnenthal made his final appearance at the IRVING PLACE THEATRE on May 1, in "Der Huetten Besitzer" ("The Ironmaster"). He was presented with a silver laurel wreath, the gift of the Hungarian societies of this city, and a silver toilet set, a tribute from Manager Conreid. He sailed for home upon the following day. .... "Trilby" was produced in German at the GERMANIA THEATRE on May 2. The role of Svengali was played by Franz Reicher, of the Deutsch Theatre, Berlin, who than made his first appearance in this city. Gisela Wilke played the title role..... At the FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE, on May 1, was presented, for the first time in this city, "Mother Goose," a musical extravaganza, in three acts, by Edgar T. Smith and Louis De Lange.

Fifth Avenue Theatre.—De Wolf Hopper and his company appeared at this house on May 4, and were again seen in Sousa and Klein's three act comic opera, "The Charlatan." A large audience was present, and the work was received with enthusiastic demonstrations of favor. Many of the numbers and some of the stage business won numerous encores, and Mr. Hopper was obliged to make two speeches, both of which were well framed and excellently delivered. The work has been, from a popular standpoint, much improved since its original presentation in this city, changes both in music and in stage business making it much lighter and more frolicsome. Some of the charm of the vocal score has disappeared to make place for more sprightly numbers, but, remembering the somewhat lukewarm reception accorded the work upon its earlier presentation here, it must be admitted that the changes were wisely made. The new numbers are all lively and pleasing, and the work as it now stands is still worthy of strong commendation. The cast has been greatly changed. Nella Bergen, Katherine Carlisle, Alice Judson and Alfred Klein have all disappeared, their respective roles having been bestowed upon Hilda Clark, Jeanne Towler, Jessie Mackaye and Snitz Edwards, the new incumbents making their first appearance in the roles upon this occasion. Most of the new comers are well known here, and all proved to be satisfactory, although the cast has not been improved by the changes. Jessie Mackaye, who was loaned by the Messrs. Frohman, won the principal honors of the support. She was engaged by Daniel Frohman upon her graduation here from Franklin H. Sargent's Academy, but, no suitable role having been found for her in the Lyceum Theatre productions, she was loaned to Charles Frohman, and made her professional debut on March 8, 1897, at the Garrick Theatre, this city, in a small role in "Never Again." In the soubrette role of Katrinka, with Mr. Hopper, she made an excellent impression by her vivacity and archness, and was accorded immediate favor in spite of the fact that her singing voice is very weak. Mr. Hopper made his fooleries very entertaining. His work was of a high order within its class, and he was more genuinely and legitimately humorous than ever before. Edmund Stanley sang excellently and was warmly applauded. A new march written by Mr. Sousa, and entitled "On the Firing Line," was heard for the first time on this occasion and was favorably received. The engagement gives promise of success. The cast: Demidoff, De Wolf Hopper; Prince Boris, Edmund Stanley; Gogol, Mark Price; Jelikoff, Snitz Edwards; Captain Peshofki, Harry P. Stone; Grand Duke, Arthur Cunningham; Koreff, Harry Preston; Showman, Charles Arthur; Anna, Hilda Clark; Katrinka, Jessie Mackaye; Sophia, Jeanne Towler; Grand Duchess, Adine Bouvier.

CHARLES FROHMAN has decided to change the name of the Lyric Theatre to the Criterion. This is named after Mr. Wyndham's theatre in London, Eng., from which Mr. Frohman has obtained so many successful comedies and dramas, and for a lease of which he is now negotiating with Mr. Wyndham. The house will open Sept. 8, when Mr. Frohman will present a new and original comedy. This will be followed by Julia Marlowe, in "Barbara Fritchie, the Frederick Girl," by Clyde Fitch. The theatre will be devoted exclusively to comedy and drama.

Herald Square Theatre.—David Henderson's extravaganza, "An Arabian Girl and Forty Thieves," now in its second week at this house, has found favor and seems destined to remain on view for some time. It affords a feast for the eye, its ballet, the scenery and costumes being of far more than ordinary merit.

Madison Square Theatre.—"Because She Loved Him So" entered on May 8 upon the seventeenth week of its run. It is still playing to excellent business, and no closing date has yet been announced. The one hundred and fiftieth performance will be given 15, and handsome souvenirs are promised.

Wallack's.—That exceedingly entertaining farce, "The Cuckoo," now in its sixth week at this house, is still in high favor. It is excellently played, and its complications are so intricate and yet so plausible as to cause continuous mirth.

Broadway Theatre.—Jacob Litt's fine production of "Shenandoah," now in its second week at this house, has evoked much favorable comment. Not only is it rich in pictorial embellishment, but it is excellently cast, and an admirable performance results. It is meeting with merited success.

Garrick Theatre.—Mrs. Leslie Carter, in "Zaza," is now in the eighteenth week of an engagement the success of which may well be called phenomenal. It is the same old story night after night, the house full to overflowing, nor are the matinees less largely attended. Mrs. Carter has much reason to be proud of the record.

THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS on April 26 granted a license to Robert G. Freeman to conduct theatrical performances at the Third Avenue Theatre. On May 3, A. H. Sheldon protested against the license on the grounds that Freeman had no longer any thing to do with the theatre, and that he (Sheldon) was the lessee, having secured a lease for a term of five years. The Police Board, after hearing Sheldon's story, rescinded the license.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY meeting of the board of trustees of the Actors' Fund of America was held in the Fund rooms in West Twenty-eighth Street May 4. The trustees decided this year to revive the anniversary exercises on the day of the annual meeting, which will occur June 6, at some theatre to be selected at a later date.

JULIA MARLOWE'S season at the Knickerbocker Theatre, as originally planned, was to last for four weeks, and so would have closed May 6. But her success in "Colinette" has been so marked that the bill will remain the same for some time longer, and Miss Marlowe's departure for Europe has been postponed accordingly.

GEORGE W. LEDERER announces that, instead of presenting the usual review the coming Summer at the Casino, he will follow up the revival of "Erminie" at this house with an adaptation from a French farce entitled "Les Fetards." Dan Daly, Marie Dressler and Edward Tyler will be in the company.

THE AMERICAN DRAMATIST CLUB has elected these officers: President, Bronson Howard; first vice president, Joseph I. C. Clarke; second vice president, Howard P. Taylor; treasurer, Richard A. Purdy; corresponding secretary, Charles Barnard; recording secretary, Charles Klein; directors, Harry P. Mawson, George H. Broadhurst and Harrison Grey Fiske.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—One of the most notable and enjoyable events of the season occurred at this house May 8, when Maude Adams appeared for the first time in a Shakespearean role, playing the unfortunate heroine in "Romeo and Juliet." The event had long been one of pleasurable anticipation, and the house was crowded in every part, all standing room being crowded, many ladies even preferring to endure the discomfort of standing rather than miss the opportunity to see the performance. The audience was of friendly disposition, and was prodigal in applause, far too prodigal, in fact, for though much of it was merited, and much was justified as an expression of good will, it was bestowed with a lack of discrimination that made it savor of insincerity. Nevertheless it was a night of triumph for Miss Adams, and her laurels were as fairly won as they were modestly worn. Let it be thoroughly understood that this incursion of Miss Adams into the highest dramatic realm was not instigated by vanity, nor was it of her own seeking, for it was planned by her manager, Charles Frohman, as a tribute to her merit as an actress and her worth as a woman. It was a generous and well merited reward, tendered at the close of her second season as a star, and proved that in every sense her worth was fully appreciated by the manager who had placed her in the stellar field. Miss Adams gave us practically a new Juliet, and, while she by no means made us desire to forget those who had previously charmed us in the role, she made an impression that we will always cherish. Moreover, we may not desire that other aspirants shall essay to play the role in similar unconventional fashion, unless they have the rare gifts with which Miss Adams has been endowed. Her Juliet was rich in those personal charms which have won for this winsome little woman our affectionate regard: simplicity, tenderness, modesty, sensitiveness and unaffected grace of speech and manner. In her first meeting with Romeo she was a timid girl, affrighted by his ardor and by the emotions it aroused within her own breast, and from that moment she was always a girl, simple and unaffected in her tenderness, and appealingly pathetic in her grief and despair. Throughout her performance, though there was much of the sincerity of love, there was little of its sensuousness, but there was all the evidence of the crushing and benumbing effects of grief, and a fine denotement of the foreshadowed horrors of the waking moment in the tomb. Miss Adams, conscious of her lack of physical force, and with a just estimate of the nature and scope of her power of emotional express on, wisely chose her method of creation of the role, and her success must be measured by her fidelity to her ideal, with which much that has become accepted as correct through tradition would have been entirely out of harmony. Hence, as previously suggested, we do not claim that former ideals were wrong, nor do we so think, but we do claim that if Miss Adams appealed less forcibly to the mind than have others she more directly reached the heart and won its tender interest and sympathy. In the tragic scenes, where it was feared she might be weak and unsatisfying, she was strong and convincing by reason of her exquisite pathos. There was every evidence that she had bestowed upon the role close and intelligent study, for her reading was good and her acting had that seeming spontaneity that is the result of well digested knowledge and well determined art. The Romeo of Wm. Faversham was far more conventional, and was creditable in this, at least, that it was the result of earnest striving. It was forceful and fervid, but Mr. Faversham's style of elocution is not well suited to the role. His reading was often faulty, and strange pauses marred the fluency of his speech. He was at his best in his most vehement scenes, notably in his duel with Tybalt, where he for a moment shone resplendent, and in the cell of Friar Laurence, when he learns of the decree of the Prince. James K. Hackett was a capable Mercutio, giving evidence of due knowledge and appreciation of the requirements and possibilities of the role, although prevented by his stubborn voice from achieving great results. Mrs. W. G. Jones as the nurse and W. H. Thompson as Friar Laurence were excellent beyond cavil, and Eugene Jepson as Capulet and W. H. Crompton as Montague were highly commendable, reaping honors in proportion to their opportunities, the larger share falling to Mr. Jepson because of his denunciatory speech, which he delivered with splendid effect. The play was handsomely costumed and well set, in spite of the fact that no efforts had been made to secure any spectacular effect. The performance as a whole proved very satisfactory, and considerably above the average. The attraction will grace this house for two weeks only, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and then will visit some of the principal cities. There can be no doubt of its great success. The cast: Escalus, prince of Verona, George Fawcett; Paris, Orrin Johnson; Montague, W. H. Crompton; Capulet, Eugene Jepson; An old man of the Capulet family, Frederick Spencer; Romeo, William Faversham; Mercutio, James K. Hackett; Benvolio, Jos. Francoeur; Tybalt, Campbell Gollan; Friar Laurence, W. H. Thompson; Friar John, Geo. Osborne Jr.; Balthazar, G. H. Howard; Samson, Wallace Jackson; Gregory, Thomas Valentine; Peter, R. Peyton Carter; Abram, George Irving; An Apothecary, Miss Helen Morgan; Juliet, Miss Maude Adams; Nurse, Miss W. G. Jones.

London Theatre.—Miaco's City Club Co. is filling another city engagement here this week, opening May 8. "A Wild Night in Washington" is the title of the rollicking first part, in which the various comedy characters succeed in creating much laughter. Marie Henry is seen as the King of the Chappies and Carrie Fulton appears as Luna, a visitor from the moon. The costumes are pretty and an assortment of various national designs is exceptionally striking. The different patriotic drops, shown in opening, cause applause. Lew Palmer opens the list of specialties with various ballads and ventriloquial imitations. The Sisters Leon present acrobatic dancing and head to head balancing, also several songs; Nellie Waters makes the welkin ring in Irish by her powerful voice; Nestor Wrenn and Holland submit a creation of fun, intermingled with clever dancing; O'Brien and Buckley are seen in a musical act, wherein Mr. O'Brien's robust comedy causes amusement. "The Divorce Court," under which title the burlesque is presented, furnishes more fun, of the kind, which the term suggests. Next week, the Merry Widows Burlesque Co.

New York.—The Man in the Moon" began May 8 its third week, and the box office receipts continue to be highly satisfactory. The burlesque is now running smoothly, and the performance is greatly improved by the many alterations made since its opening.

People's Theatre.—"The Police Inspector" is the bill this week, and the local incidents, which are calculated to thrill throughout the five acts, did not fail their purpose on May 8. The cast includes Geo. R. Sprague, Henry Markham, Joseph P. Winter, Phil McCarthy, Adelbert Knott, Maurice Pike, Aubrey Drake, Fred Herndon, Geo. Lavender, James Carlton, P. C. Shaw, Lemuel Price, Lizzie Hunt, Jessie Willick Dixon, Marie Kenzie, Natelie Mayer and Harriet Kayne. Next week, "Dixie's Land."

Star Theatre.—Verdant in popularity, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" attracted the customary crowd of people to this resort on Monday, May 8. Harry Webber heads the company, crediting himself with fifteen hundred performances of Marks, the learned legal comedian. His fifteen hundred and first performance created great laughter, and his assistants in the cast carried the revered melodrama to its usual successful issue. Next week, "Yon Yonson."

Fourteenth Street Theatre.—"Mother Goose" began its second and last week here on Monday, May 8, attracting a good house to see the beginning of the end. The favorites in the cast were well received, as usual.

Academy of Music.—An indefinite engagement of "The King of the Opium Ring" began at this theatre, May 8, when a big house attended. The cast is the same as seen previously at a neighboring house, and they gave the strong melodrama a fine portrayal.

Miner's Eighth Avenue Theatre.—The Metropolitan Burlesquers, in "A Union of Blacks and Whites," furnish the current entertainment at this resort, opening May 8, to pretty good business. Next week the Dainty Duchess Co. is announced to entertain.

Tony Pastor's Theatre.—The week of May 8 started briskly at this house, where Manager Pastor has provided another excellent bill of continuous amusement for the entertainment of his faithful clientel, who weekly find divertisement of an evidently agreeable sort. Chas. R. Sweet is the topping feature of the bill, his rather unique musical specialty finding its accustomed favor. Geo. Felix and Lydia Barry returned to old friends, after many months absence, and found a welcome of the most hearty sort. Miss Barry's singing met its accustomed vigorous favor, and Mr. Felix won continued laughter through his clever acrobatic antics. The act gave immense satisfaction. The Columbian Comedy Four presented a novelty musical specialty with excellent effect, and Harry Edson created a mild flutter of wonderment through the medium of his cleverly trained dog, "Doc." Emma Carus found an abundance of favor, as usual, singing a number of pretty songs in her most approved and skillful manner. The excellence of the entertainment was greatly enhanced by the comedy efforts of Brown, Harrison and Brown; the athletic specialty offered by Stewart and Gillen, and the clever monologue furnished by Harry Thomson. Others who rendered valuable service in the mission of amusement were Allen Wightman, clay modeler; Murray and Alden, in a travesty sketch; O'Connell and Mack, in an Irish turn; Hornman, a rather clever magician, and Lewis and Blakeley, in a dancing act. The bill next week will be headed by the Russell Brothers and will include clever Edwin Latelle, Jones, Grant and Jones, and others.

Keith's Union Square Theatre.—Booking Manager Sam K. Hodgdon is amply atoning for some previous shortcomings by furnishing bills of uncommon excellence lately. The offering for May 8 and week is of an uncommon order of excellence, being particularly strong in feature acts well worthy of the distinction. Ching Ling Foo is retained for another week of mystification, and, with his assistants, renewed the sensational hit scored on his local debut, a week ago. Rose Melville, entering upon her third week, maintained "Sis Hopkins" in prime favor. Her cleverness seems more pronounced through repeated witnessing of her work, and there seems no let up in her popularity. Helene Mora is another feature of prominence; her singing won the accustomed hit these audiences have been in the habit of assuring her. "Caums" is the dramatic sketch, its interpretation being entrusted to Howard Hall, Albert Tavernur, Mrs. Helen Bell and Zenodie Williams; their success was merited. Dooley and Ten Brooke, black face comedians and vocalists, were in pronounced favor, and the Wartenburg Brothers displayed unusual cleverness in feats of foot jugglery. La Falalla, a gorgeous spectacular dance offering, was much admired. The lady is extremely graceful and the light effects are handsome. Rounding out the bill, excellent amusement resulted from the efforts of the Dresden Trio, in the one act operetta, "The Queen's Fan;" Earl and Wilson, in a musical act; Drawee, a clever juggler; Murphy and Nolan, in an Irish turn, and the Constantine Sisters, an acrobatic trio; Raymond and Clark, in an acrobatic sketch. Billed at the top of all these features and entertainers, the American biograph retains its station in popularity to a pronounced degree. New pictures are offered this week, with the favorites of previous lists retained. Business is excellent.

Proctor's Theatre.—Topping the current bill at this resort is Marshall P. Wilder, than whom no entertainer in his line is more popular. At the opening performances, May 8, Mr. Wilder was given hearty receptions and kept his audiences in a merry mood with his witticisms. The Mimic Four, in their travesty sketches, were also in high favor Hines and Remington, in their latest character act, "The New Woman Tramp," gave the best of satisfaction. The work of Earl Remington was particularly clever, but both performers fully earned the marks of favor accorded them. Seymour and Dupree, a clever acrobatic comedy duo, were accorded a full measure of approval. Lillie Western, in a musical act, came in for a full share of favor. Forrester and Floyd, in their sketch, were well liked. They presented a clever act and well deserved the favor with which they were received. Marie Heath, in her well known "kid" specialty, was well received, as of yore. Tobey's art views were continued. Other numbers were presented by Joe Natus, vocalist; Foreman and West, comedy duo; the Three Lamartine Brothers, gymnasts; Colter and Starr, black face comedians; Josephine Arthur, soprano singer, and Prof. Yarrick, magician, each of whom came in for a share of popular favor. Sunday's concert drew the usual good attendance with the following bill: Gilmore and Leonard, Hal Merritt, Joseph O'Hare, Foreman and West, Ward and Curran, Yarrick, Bryant and Saville, McWaters and Tyson, Grace Hazard, Ward Bros., Grant and Norton, Marinellas, Prof. Shedman, the Randalles, McPhee and Hill, Three Onri Sisters, Tobey's views.

Koster & Bial's.—An audience of fair proportions gathered together May 8, to pass judgment upon the current bill, and a favorable verdict was rendered. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, in their clever sketch, "When Two Hearts Are Won," scored a decided success. Leonida's troupe of trained cats and dogs gave a remarkable exhibition of what these animals can be taught to do. Josie De Witt rendered violin solos with her usual success. The Huline Brothers, in their eccentric musical act, made their first appearance here and scored well. The Phasey troupe of dancers were well liked. Silvern and Emerle, on the flying rings, performed many feats of skill and daring. Henri French began his twelfth and last week, and his expert bicycling and comic juggling were still in high favor. Other favorites on the bill were: The Fredericks Troupe of Demon Acrobats, Frederick Clirenze's Quintet, the Griffiths Brothers, with their Blondin Donkey; Ethel Levey, in songs; the Beaumont Sisters, in songs and dances, and Johnson and Dean, in "ecron" songs and dances. The Sunday concert, 7, was well attended.

Manhattan Theatre.—During her peregrinations about town "A Female Drummer" has covered pretty thoroughly the theatrical districts at all points of the compass, and has covered them satisfactorily, too, if her continued loitering with us may be taken as a criterion. The engagement which began at this theatre on May 8 was ushered in most brilliantly, for the man in search of an unoccupied seat after the performance began had a pretty difficult task before him, and the greetings extended to the players were vociferous and well deserved. Johnstone Bennett and all concerned entered thoroughly into the rollicking spirit of the farce, and the individual hits scored were many.

Huber's Palace Museum.—Prof. Will G. Ferris' hypnotic tests are attracting considerable attention to this house. The week of May 8 started off with big crowds on all floors, Manager Anderson's stage entertainment being up to the usual standard of excellence, while curiosities on the main floor are diversified. The list includes Ishmael, Hindoo fakir; Sidney Hinman, Coney Island life saver; Prince Albini and Le Brandt, mind readers; Rodney, smoke artist; the La Notes, aerial act; Lottie, the educated orang outang, and a number of others.

Weber & Fields'.—"Helter Skelter" began May 8 its sixth week, and is still a popular laugh provoker. In spite of the fast waning season there is little evidence of it in the size of the audiences at this resort, and the attendance continues large. The burlesque on "Catherine" also retains its popularity. The current olio is furnished by the O'Kabe Japanese Troupe of Acrobats, nine in number, who perform many difficult feats in balancing, juggling, etc.

Miner's Bowery Theatre.—The company playing here this week, opening May 8, is billed as the Parisian Belles. The olio includes Allen and West, musical comedians; Belle Taylor, soprano; Jos. Madden and Dan McCarthy, Irish comedians; Harry and Sadie Fields, whose act finishes with a comical Hebrew cake walk; Gladys St. John and Nellie Lytton, vocalists; Williamson and Stone, black face characters, and the Gotham Comedy Four. "Harem Scarum" is the title of the burlesque, in which Violet Mascotte assumes the lead. Next week, the Rentz-Santley Co.

Pleasure Palace.—A well filled auditorium ushered in the current week, Monday, May 8, at Manager Proctor's uptown theatre, and of merriment seems an assured fact for the patrons of the Palace. Gilmore and Leonard of "Hogan's Alley" fame, are the head liners on the bill, and their Irish witticisms aroused much laughter. A novelty in trained animal acts was Roscoe's trained pigs, this being the American debut of these sagacious porcines. Webb and Hasson gave a clever exhibition of head balancing. Charles G. Kilpatrick found favor as the rough rider 'cyclist. Bryant and Saville were a merry comedy duo, and in their comedietta, "Prof. Schultz," discoursed sweet music from various musical instruments in a manner that secured for them well merited approval. Riley and Hughes plantation singers and dancers, was another turn that pleased. Master Joe O'Hare, the sweet boy tenor, rendered musical numbers very acceptably. Fish and Quigg presented their comedy sketch to rounds of applause. Gilbert Girard cleverly imitated birds and animals. E. M. Hall manipulated his banjo in an expert manner. E. J. Holland was an expert equilibrist. Joseph Conlan made up as a grotesque appearing Irish woman, provoked uproarious laughter by his Celtic witticisms. Up to date views of the day's doings served to amuse the auditors. Sunday's concert, from 2.30 till 10.30 P. M., presented Russell Bros., Harrigan, Lillie Western, the Silvers, the Tanakas, Pepita and Rosita, Pat and Katie Rooney, and many others. Marshall P. Wilder is billed in black type for next week at the top of a lengthy bill.

Atlantic Garden.—This resort, which caters to family audiences by presenting a number of strong vaudeville acts each week, offered an exceptionally big bill Monday evening, May 8, the celebration of its forty-first anniversary. The following turns are engaged for this week: Madame Flower, Hickey and Nelson, the Three Martinette Brothers, Linton and McIntyre, and McWatters and Tyson. Chas. Eschert is amusement director.

The house was sold out before 8 o'clock on the opening night. Weber's Dainty Duchess Co. last week played to good business.

Brooklyn.—That the Summer season has fairly set in is evidenced by the fact that several of our local houses are dark and the closing of others is announced. The Columbia will open for three performances, May 26, 27, of "Romeo and Juliet," with Maude Adams as Juliet. The regular season at the Montauk closed 6, but the house is now occupied by the Castle Square Opera Co. for a season of opera. The Bijou closes 13. Manager Harry C. Kennedy announces that the season has been the most successful the house has had since it opened, about nine years ago. In no previous period of the same duration has there been so many new plays presented, nor so many high class ones seen, at a popular priced playhouse in Brooklyn as have been presented at the Bijou during the past season. Mr. Kennedy says: "From the inception of the season I saw that the patrons of my house wanted something new, and were always ready and willing to liberally patronize such offerings, and I made an effort to please them. Some of the engagements created so much interest that they were lengthened into two weeks, which is a very unusual thing at any popular priced house. This was particularly the case with Chauncey Olcott, whose admirers in Brooklyn are many, and was evidenced by the remarkably successful engagements he played during this season here, where he was for two weeks on two different occasions. The public was quick to observe the improvement made in getting the best attractions obtainable, and showed their appreciation by crowding the house on innumerable occasions, and theatre parties were so frequent that they were looked upon as regular weekly affairs. The policy of the management adopted this season will be carried out next season. Many notable attractions have already been booked and others of equal strength will be added." Mr. Kennedy adds a word of praise to Business Manager Edwin C. Mason for his zealous efforts and prompt and careful attention to the patrons.

MONTAUK.—The Castle Square Opera Co. inaugurated its Spring season of grand opera here 8, before a large audience, with Verdi's "Aida" as the bill for the week. The company gives its operas with a lavishness of pictorial display, a richness of mounting, an intelligence and taste in costuming, and a strength of cast and chorus which is most praiseworthy. The company is large, and the principals include Yvonne De Treville and Effie Stewart, who will alternate Aida; Joseph F. Sheehan and E. C. Hedmont, who will alternate Rhadames; Lizzie MacNichol and Greta Risley, as Amneris; Homer Lind and Harry Luckstone, as Amonasro; E. N. Knight as the King and Roland Paul as the Messenger. Next week, "Faust," and week beginning 22, "Romeo and Juliet."

A competent company has been engaged to interpret the characters, and includes Harry Bagge, Edwin Mordaunt, Neil Florence and Jane Courthope. The play met with decided favor and the company was entirely satisfactory. The season ends here with the current week.

STAR.—The Rentz-Santley Co., one of the most popular burlesque companies that visits this city, has come for a return engagement, opening 8, with an afternoon and evening performance, before two large audiences. The entertainment begins with a skit on the Cuban war, and is entitled "Yankee Dewey Dandy." The olio includes Barth and Fleming, the Engstrom Sisters, the Walkers, Dick Ward, Johnson and Gordon, and Charles Robinson. On the opening night "Lucia di Lammermoor" was the bill. During the remainder of the week "Il Trovatore," "The Bohemian Girl" and "Carmen" will be sung. At the opening performance, 8, the house was crowded. The opera company's stay here has been remarkably successful. Big business last week.

GAYETY.—There was a large audience present night of 8, when Karl Haswin presented "The Silver King." The olio: John Weber, Tom Nolan and Cora White, Fabian and Carleton, Sylvia Starr, the Washburn Sisters and Mackie and Walker. A burlesque called "A Lady of Quantity" brings the programme to a close. Manager Frank B. Carr's popularity is seen in the great number of social and political organizations which have bought up the house for the best part of the week. Some one of the many Eastern District organizations attends the theatre in a body at every performance this week. Tom McIntosh's Comedy and Vaudeville Co. is booked for week of 15.

Friday, 8, Willie Collier presented his new play, "Mr. Smooth," to a very large audience, at whose hands it met with instant favor. NEW JERSEY.

Newark.—This is announced as the last week of the Corse Payton Comedy Co. at the Newark Theatre. The amount and quality of the entertainment at the prices has been a revelation to Newark theatregoers, and they have taxed the capacity of the house from the beginning, with no apparent abatement. This week the features of the vaudeville performance are the Prentiss Trio and the Harvey Sisters. On Saturday night, May 6, "The Black Ruby" was produced, and Mr. Gotthold states that it was the first time on any stage. The author's name is Geo. Hoey. Little Chip, as the Private, and the Grayson Sisters scored the greatest success of the evening, in their dancing specialty. The scenery and effects were as bright and perfect as if just from the frame, and the entire production a credit to all concerned. Manager Maze Edwards has labored hard to make the house a success, and his efforts have been appreciated.....Helen Dingeon, the former well known prima donna who has been living here the past two years with her husband, Julius Streglitz, is just recovering from a serious illness and will shortly leave for San Francisco to look after some real estate affairs. "Trelawney of the Wells," at Powers', is the first, and "Two Rogues and a Romance," put on by Stuart Robson and company, at the Grand, is the second. Among the other offerings are such startling novelties as "The Mikado," "East Lynne" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the latter being the booking at two theatres. Business for the past week has not necessitated the use of drays to go to the bank, but it has been fair.

POWERS'.—Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Theatre Company, with several old and some new faces, is here with "Trelawney of the Wells." Mary Mannering takes the role of Rose Trelawney, and among those present are: Edward Morgan, Charles Walcot, William Courtleigh, Charles W. Bangs, Mrs. Stuart Robson, Harold Russell, Gertrude Perry, Edwin Holt, Willard Curtis, Ida Van Cortland, Mabel Strickland and Mattie Burroughs. ACADEMY.—Here also is an "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Davis & Busby's production. Particular attention is paid here to scenic effects, such as the Ohio River by moonlight, the race between the steamers R. E. Lee and Natchez, and Little Eva's ascent into Heaven. "South Before the War" was fairly well patronized last week.

BIJOU.—"The Prisoner of Algiers," with Frank Lindon in the leading role, is the card offered by Clawson & Macoy. "Human Hearts" did well last week.

Manager James Jay Brady has concluded not to take his company to the coast, as he had intended. Miscellaneous.

S. LUBIN gave an exhibition of enterprise at the Ninth and Arch Musee, Philadelphia, Pa., May 3. A clipping from a local paper says: "In addition to the regular cinecograph exhibition of moving pictures there was shown, last night, a 1500ft. life motion picture of the big fire at Thirteenth Street and Ridge Avenue yesterday morning. In this picture the exciting incidents of the great conflagration are vividly reproduced. The firemen are seen as they work vigorously in their gallant attempts to check the rapidly spreading flames. The hasty efforts of the occupants of the doomed building to remove their possessions to a place of safety, the valuable assistance rendered by the force of 200 patrolmen, under the personal direction of Superintendent Quirk, the lurid pall of smoke overhanging the leaping flames and every phase and detail of the destructive blaze have been faithfully recorded on the long photographic film. Professor S. Lubin, the inventor of the cinecograph, was on the ground shortly after the starting of operators, and the important work of securing the notable pictures was personally directed by him. The negatives were hurried to the Lubin factory, and the difficult work of printing and completing the film was carried on at high pressure speed, with the view of breaking all records. The pictures were finished before 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

CONNECTICUT.

Waterbury.—Interest in the theatres is gradually waning at the approaching warm weather, and Manager Jacques announces the termination of the season with the last week in May at both houses. Business has been especially good here during the past season, and consequently the local theatres have generous attendance.

POLI'S.—James A. Herne, in "Griffith Davenport," comes 10. Julia Arthur, in "A Lady of Quality," 12, and Willie Collier, in "Mr. Smooth," 13. Sousa's band did fairly well May 1. Wm. H. Crane played his first engagement here for several years 2, in "The Head of the Family," to good business. W. H. West's Minstrels (return date), 3, had big business. The singing contingent of this organization is the best ever heard here in minstrelsy. Coming: "The Prisoner of Zenda" 18, Chauncey Olcott 26.

JACQUES.—Frankie Carpenter's Co., headed by Frankie Carpenter and Jere Grady, opens 8, with "An American Princess," to continue for the week. Their repertory consists of "Pawn Ticket 210," "The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown," "Coon, the Shaughraun," "Struck Gas" and "Little Ferret." The Waite Stock Company (return engagement) did a large business week ending 6. Their repertory included: "The Child of the Sierras," "The Power of Love," "An American in Ireland," "East Lynne," "A Dangerous Woman," "The Boy from Boston," "Wife for Wife," "Country Politics," "London by Night" and "Nell, the Waif." Annie Louise Ames (wife of Manager Jacques), the star of the organization, was the recipient of beautiful bouquets of flowers from admiring friends at every performance.

NOTES.—Frederick Truesdell, of Wm. H. Crane's company, made his first appearance upon the stage in this city, some seven years ago, in a one act playlet, entitled "Comedy and Tragedy," at Leavenworth Hall. Gladys Wallis, of the same company, was entertained by friends 2. Miss Wallis is a graduate of the Convent Notre Dame, this city..... Arthur Selby, a former Waterbury boy, is in advance of Goodrich-McLaughlin's Circus. Mr. Selby reports a successful season with Kennedy's Players. .....Jean Ingraham, a well-known repertory actor, is at present doing reportorial work on The Waterbury Republican.....The Waite Stock Co. closed its season here 6.....J. H. Nash, formerly of Hartford, is running a museum on Bank Street that is receiving a generous patronage.....Goodrich-McLaughlin's Circus left its Winter quarters at Bridgeport 1, and has been playing along the valley. It appeared here 4, 5, and gave a good show to excellent business.....Prof. Sterling's School of Palmistry came back last week for a brief stay.

Bridgeport.—At Park City Theatre "Prince Ramon," the spectacular comic opera, given under the auspices of Court Waldemere, No. 19, F. of A., May 1-6, was presented by Capt. Chas. Wallace Eddy, to big business. The work of all connected with the cast was good, and especially strong was Chas. E. Dickerson, in the role of the Irish Minister of Police. Sousa and his band came afternoon of 2, to big business. Coming: "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush" 8, Jas. A. Herne, in "Griffith Davenport," 9; Wm. H. Crane, in "The Head of the Family," 11; Julia Arthur, in "A Lady of Quality," 13.

SMITH'S THEATRE.—Last week business was up to the usual average at this house, and there is no noticeable drop in attendance, although the season is drawing rapidly to its close. Coming: "A Man of Mystery" 8-10, Myles McCarthy, in "Dear Hearts of Ireland," 11-13.

MINNESOTA.

St. Paul.—At the Metropolitan Opera House Otis Skinner and his excellent support produced "Rosemary" to moderate sized, but very enthusiastic audiences May 1, 3. The Kirmess had big business 4, 6. Clara Thropp, in "A Doll's House" and "A Traant's Spouse," comes 7, 8; "The Turtle" 9,10, Olga Nethersole, in repertory, 11, 13; Dan Godfrey's Band 14, afternoon and evening. Last week Manager Scott put on a new drop curtain painted by Mr. Davis, the Metropolitan Opera House scene painter. The scene is Italian, with a castle in the foreground, with a stream leading back to mountains. A strong feature of the curtain is the artistic coloring and a medallion at the bottom of the picture.

GRAND.—"Too Much Money" had big business week of 1. The house will be dark 7 13, except 7, when a concert by the Minnesota State Band Sunday night. No other dates are given out at this writing until "Uncle Tom's Cabin" 21.

The new faces for 8 are: Hoffman Duo, Ella Hewett, Sanford and Darlington, Mayme Smith, Coyne Bros., Gladys Hamilton, Maybell Woods, Wm. J. Wells and stock. The new farce for the week is called "The Growler."

CLARA MATHES is playing an engagement at Turner Hall to fairly good business, and giving good satisfaction. There is a change of bill nightly. The people in the support are very good.

Minneapolis.—At the Metropolitan Opera House Olga Nethersole was here May 8-10, and "The Turtle" is finishing out the week. Primrose & Dockstader's Minstrels will follow 14. Clara Thropp did fine work before fair audiences 4-6.

PALACE MUSEUM.—For 8 and week, in the curio hall, the Gueyers and Prof. Heller; in the theatres, the Gotham Stock Co., Swain and Newman, Frankie Hall, Jessie Sutton and Frank Murphy. Business is only fair.

The boats are to be entirely wooden and of the twenty-five foot class, and the races are to begin on Monday, Aug. 21, and continue daily, except Sundays, until concluded. The winner of three races is to be winner of matches, the first, third and fifth races to be around a triangular course of twenty-one nautical miles. The second and fourth races are to be a windward and leeward course of nine nautical miles and return buoys to be left to starboard. Any race where the winner takes more than five and three-quarter hours to sail must be sailed again.

The Ring.

THE POLICE BOARD, at its meeting on May 2, granted licenses to the Lenox, New Broadway, Greenwood and Pelican Athletic Clubs to give boxing shows, but refused licenses to the Coney Island, National and Hercules Athletic Clubs, the former by a tie vote. This action will prevent the holding of the championship fight between Fitzsimmons and Jeffries on Coney Island, as had been arranged for. Just what the outcome will be remains to be seen. Efforts are being made to secure the match by a syndicate of Denver, Col., sports, who have offered a purse of $25,000, but nothing has as yet been decided upon.

PATSY SWEENEY, of the Hub, and Jack Downey, the clever Brooklyn boxer, tried conclusions before the Greenwood Athletic Club, in Brooklyn, N. Y., night of May 8, a large crowd attending. Contrary to general expectation, Downey ran up against too tough a proposition to successfully oppose, and, after receiving a severe beating, he was so nearly done for in the seventeenth round that the police interfered, stopping the mill, whereupon the referee declared in favor of Sweeney. The winner was attended by "Spike" Sullivan and John Sullivan, while Downey's esquires were Jack Ryan, Andy Kelly, Benny Murray and Jim Price.

JOE WOLCOTT AND CHARLEY JOHNSON came together at Athens, Pa., on Monday evening, May 8, having agreed to fight twenty rounds for gate money. The dusky boxer had the game in his hands from the beginning, Johnson being entirely outclassed, and, although he did fairly well in the early rounds, his finish soon became apparent, and in the eleventh round his cake became dough, the referee giving the verdict in favor of Wolcott.

JOE CAIN AND BILLY WHISTLER faced each other for twenty rounds at the Greenwood Athletic Club, in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Saturday evening, May 6, the latter taking the place of Marty McCue, who was stated to be incapacitated by illness from fulfilling his engagement. The milling was of the order tame throughout, and the crowd were well pleased when the spiritless show terminated in a draw.

LEW MORGAN AND JACK HARE battled in the old style, with bare fists and under the regular rules of the P. R., in a secluded spot in London, Eng., on the night of April 27, Morgan gaining the verdict at the close of the twenty-seventh round.

Greville, challengers, 9—7, 6—4, 6—4. Men and women's doubles—R. F. Doherty and C. Cooper, holders, beat G. Greville and Miss Austin, challengers, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3.

BASEBALL, CRICKET, ETC.

E. P. B., Chicago.—There was no inventor to the game "so called" baseball. The national game of baseball can trace its origin back some fifty or sixty years, when a number of gentlemen used to play on a vacant plot of ground where Madison Square Garden now stands. On Sept. 23, 1845, these gentlemen formally organized the Knickerbocker Club and adopted playing rules. Thus it occurred that a party of gentlemen formed an organization which was the nucleus of the now national game of the United States, and from which the succeeding clubs derived their rules of playing.

R. H. J., Providence.—When two games are scheduled to be played the same afternoon, the second game must be commenced within ten minutes after the time of ending the first game.

A. S. F., Baltimore.—The batsman is credited with a base hit in all cases where a base runner is retired by being hit by a batted ball.

F. X. M.—In 1894, Yale 3 and Brown 0.

J. L. S.—In 1894, Yale, 3; Brown, 0. In 1895, Yale, 2; Brown, 1. In 1896, Yale, 0; Brown, 3. In 1897, Yale, 2, Brown, 1. In 1898, Yale, 1; Brown, 2. Grand total: Yale, 8; Brown, 7.

R. I. E., Brooklyn.—Our rule in such a case is that the winning team must make at least two runs, and that 1 to 0 does not win a two to one bet.

CARDS.

D. R.—B loses his meld on that hand; he must take a trick to make the meld good.

K. M. B., Chicago.—You are right; there is nothing in the rules that prevents the discarding of a point, as you will see from the following: "Rule 26. After the discard, and after all the other players have been helped, if there should not remain in the pack sufficient cards to perfect the dealer's hand, he may select from the discard any trump card or cards, provided they are not points." "Rule 37. After the play of a hand is completed, all missing points found in the discard (but not in the 'widow') may be scored by the side who named the suit, provided they did not themselves discard the said points, in which case the adversaries may score them." Low is the lowest trump out.

G. F. S., St. Paul.—B does not forfeit the pot, but wins, provided he has the best hand. A's contention is too absured to be taken seriously. It is not reasonable to presume that B, with jacks up, after having put one dollar into the pot before the draw, would not call a ten cent bet. His "all right" was a call, pure and simple.

G. H., Walden.—A is right; 1,000 points constitutes game, and as he had it he was entitled to claim game.

J. E. L., Circleville.—1. You cannot. 2. If two handed you meld 150, take a trick, meld 20 spades, take another traick and meld 300 pinochle. 3. You do not have to. 4. Only when trump is played.

MARION, Gas City.—The dealer is right; when, in the draw, the dealer exposes a card the player to whom the said card was dealt cannot accept it, but it must be placed on the bottom of the pack, and the player be given the next card from the top of the deck, and before any player to his left has been helped.

R. B. S., Boston.—Yes, any straight flush constitutes what some players choose to call a "royal" or "tiger" flush. The only work on draw poker that we have seen which mentions "royal" flush agrees with this ruling.

TURF.

C. E. T., New York.—Monmouth Park race course was opened to the public in 1871.

DICE, DOMINOES, ETC.

L. B., New Orlean.—We know of no rules for the game you refer to. Parties who invent new rules should also frame laws for their government.

RING.

J. F. H., Philadelphia.—George Lavigne and Joe Wolcott fought twice; on Dec. 2, 1895, Wolcott attempted to knock out Lavigne in fifteen rounds, but the latter won on his merits, at Maspeth, L. I., N. Y.; on Oct. 20, 1897, Lavigne beat Wolcott in San Francisco, Cal., the fight lasting twelve rounds.

J. F. M., St. Louis.—James J. Corbett and John L. Sullivan fought at New Orleans, La., Sept. 7, 1892, twenty-one rounds being contested. The fight was for the boxing championship of the world.

T. W., New York City.—The match referred to was so announced, we believe, but the weights were not those of the regular featherweight class.

MISCELLANEOUS

M. B., Yoakum.—We have no records of a hose company racing at a less distance than 166⅔ yards. See CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1899 for all records.

L. G., Springfield.—Write to Percy G. Williams, Bergen Beach, Brooklyn, N. Y.

M. H.—We have no data that will enable us to answer your query.

C. L. O., Salt Lake City.—There having been no election, and the party bet upon being neither elected or defeated, the bet is null and void.

News of the Game.

The N. A. C. B. for May is at hand. It is somewhat reduced in circumstances, size and subscription price per year. Bro. Stearns finds that he does not get the support that he merits, and consequently has been compelled to make a change, lessening the cost of printing and the subscription price, in order to save the magazine. There is no doubt that Bro. Stearns has run nearly up to his limit of patience, time and expenditure for the benefit of the game, and if the players don't give him a heartier support he will soon quit.....In looking over the England vs. Scotland match we find that as Dama, in The Wallasey Critic, says that: "England, unfortunately, forgot Bailey, and was bereft of the services of Jewett, Beattie, Richmond, Tescalelt and Mittchell." "Benson, a reserve man, made a creditable score of 1 to 1 and 9 drawn." From this on Dama can find nothing favorable for England, and winds up the article by blaming the English system of election.....Mr. Bernsee finds that he is unable to accept the proposition made by Joseph Collins for a match. R. P. Ostrander says that there are some sports in Brooklyn yet, and that he would be pleased to take Mr. Bernsee's place and play Mr. Collins for the same amount. Dr. Schaefer inquires: "What says Mr. Collins?".....So John McEntee intends to visit his former home. Well, John is just now trying the depth of the game as he sees it, and as some new "Fitzgerald kinks" are floating around Twenty-third Street, no doubt that John has made good use of his trawl net. We wish him an enjoyable time.....Surprises continually crop up. Bro. L. S. Head gave us a call the other day, and to say the least, we were more than pleased to see him. He says that checkers are not very swift in Albany, and feels as though something good was in store for him whenever he can see the boys in New York.....The players of Turners' Fall, Mass., had a team match recently with Springfield and came off victors by the score of: Turners' Fall, 16; Springfield, 9; draws, 11.....R. Jordan's total score in Victoria is: Won, 1,280; lost, 10; drawn, 196. Truly, a remarkable score.....Joe Maize, in The Pittsburg Dispatch, says that he believes that Mr. Jordan can easily get engagements in the United States to the aggregate value of $2,000 and hotel expenses. Joe has indeed worked hard on this Barker-Jordan business..... The New York players are projecting a Decoration Day event, which, if it matures, will create considerable interest locally.

Game No. 2,212.

We have much pleasure in giving from The Montreal Gazette the game which decided the Dominion championship in its recent tourney; besides being an excellent introduction of Magnus Smith to the great chess world. The M. G. says: "When the players took their seats on Friday, Smith was even with Flack, and they were only half a point ahead of Saunders and Goldstein, with Davies ½ behind them—i. e., there was but one clear point between first and fifth man! Plenty of excitement."

(a) This sacrifice yields a promising attack, but against the champion's steady defence did not prove quite good enough.

(?) A blunder; overlooking the reply.

(!) The only move; but seems quite sufficient.

Bird's Opening.

The following game upset the anticipated order of prizes even more than the preceding; and we are more than glad to give so interesting a specimen of Mr. Secretary Snellgrove. Mr. Flack, of Kingston, as above noted, was bracketed with Mr. Smith at top score, but lost both first and second prizes by the following defeat:

Mr. Snellgrove.	Mr. Flack.	Mr. Snellgrove.	Mr. Flack.

(?) The only result that we can see of some of Black's play is to allow White to concentrate his attack and win material superiority. Mr. F. must have played some better games than this to have reached the stand he had at the opening of the last round.

 Mr. Bird's "Chess Masterpieces," p. 149, gives the following opening between Henry Charlick, Esq.

This gentleman, for very many years one of our favorite masters and chess editors, was born in London, July 8, 1845, and arrived in Adelaide on Good Friday, '49, where he has since resided. Mr. Charlick learned chess at fifteen years of age, and up to the present time has competed in eight tournaments, winning first prize in four; second, in three, and fourth once. Not a bad record, seeing that five of them were handicaps, and he always in Class I. His even tournaments follow:

1864. This was his entrance to public chess play, at the age of nineteen! This tourney was on the cutting down, or halving, principle. Mr. C. won first prize (not money) after a keen final struggle with the late W. J. Fullarton, by 3 to 2, 2 draws. His complete score in the tourney was 9 to 2, 2 drawn.

In 1886 our subject was the recipient of a "testimonial purse" of £15 from South Australian patrons and chess players, "for his services to the game," etc.

1887. A big jump in time, and in quality of the competitors. The last previous contest was a handicap, of which more presently. The present was an "Australian Chess Congress" in Adelaide. Mr. C. won the first prize, £50, and the championship of Australia, with a score of 6 to 0, 3 drawn.

1888. "The Melbourne Chess Congress" resulted in a tie with F. W. Crane Jr., with a score of 5 to 0, 4 drawn. In the play off Mr. Crane won, Mr. Charlick taking second prize of £40, with a score 1—2—1. The summary of these tournaments shows a record of—won, 21; lost, 4; drawn, 10: with a "Cr. by cash," £105.

HANDICAPS.

1868. At the Adelaide C. C., the biggest club in the colony, Class I, won first prize (not money) with the record score of 23 to 0, 1 drawn!!

1892. The Adelaide C. C. held a special tournament to celebrate the 25th anniversary of its organization, offering a cup (to be won twice), and a short list of money prizes. Mr. C. alone was Class I, as always since; and won first prize of £10, and got one leg in for the cup, with a score of 9 to 3, 2 drawn.

1893. Again competed in the handicap for the cup, winning second prize, two guineas; score—9—2—2.

In 1895 Mr. C. won a special brilliancy prize of one guinea in a competion of The Sydney Morning Herald, for games actually played.

1897. Again competed for the cup, but could get no nearer than fourth place, with a prize of 15s. Score—7 to 4, no draws.

1898, and last. Again had a try for the cup, and just missed it by a close shave. Second prize, £2. Score—6—1—2. This gives the very honorable summary of 75 won; 14 lost; 17 drawn; or 83⅓ to 22½.

In problems our contributor writes: "Competed in former years in problem competitions, but never got a prize; had several times 'hon. mention' in European and colonial tourneys. Was author of the set 'Antipodes,' five positions in the big London tourney of '72, managed by Loewenthal, Waite, Abbott, etc. My set was thrown out in error, as it was supposed to be faulty; but Professor Berger of Graz showed in The Westminster Papers that the set was quite sound, and should have received the prize which had been withheld. But I never got redress. This was hard luck."

From the above excellent record of so many years, the reader will see on what grounds Bro. Charlick writes that with this large measure of success he is very well satisfied; and that chess has not been so unprofitable as some pastimes.

To this we may add that for the time that remains to us, which we know not, we may hope to share even in increased measure the esteem and friendship of our genial correspondent; and still have years of delight in receiving his excellent editorial work.

THE DUNKIRK (N. Y.) ATHLETIC CLUB has leased the old Cary Mill property for one year. Immediate possession will be taken, and the quarters will be fitted up with gymnasium, bath room, parlor and other conveniences. There will also be a boxing arena, around which will be erected an amphitheatre with seating room for six hundred persons.

C. BENNETT, of the Finchley Harriers, proved the winner of the annual ten miles race for the amateur championship of England, which was decided at the Vulcan Grounds, Derby, on April 23, in presence of about two thousand persons. Eight started, and the winner's time was 54m. 18⅗s.; J. T. Rimmer, Liverpool Harriers, second, by 150yds.; G. W. Smith third.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE AND LEHIGH UNIVERSITY again played a tie game of lacrosse on May 3, at South Bethlehem, Pa., the score being, as before, 2 to 2.

The Ring.

Peter Maher and Gus Ruhlin

Furnished a surprise party to the crowd that was attracted to the home of the Lenox Athletic Club, this city, on the evening of May 2, by the announcement that these big fellows would meet in a boxing bout of twenty rounds. Maher was settled upon as a very likely winner inside the limit by the knowing sports, who accordingly made him a hot favorite, with few to do Billy Madden's big 'un reverence. Contrary to anticipation, however, Maher fell far short of doing his reputation justice, while the Ohioan put up a far better fight than any one had given him credit for being able to do, on the level. The fighting was even throughout, and each principal received a goodly share of punishment, both of Maher's eyes being discolored, while Ruhlin's face also showed evidences of the Irishman's handiwork; but neither was apparently able to get in the finishing touch, and the result was a draw. Maher was waited upon by "Spike" Sullivan, Pete Burns, Pete Lowry and Billy Hennessey, while Billy Madden, Charley Goff, Jack O'Brien and D. Curry attended to Ruhlin's wants.

"KID" CARTER AND SAM TONKINS were the principals in the leading bout at the Pelican Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, N. Y., on Saturday evening, May 6, being matched to box twenty rounds at 142lb. The fighting was of the rip tearing order while it lasted, neither lad paying much attention to science, but Tonkins, although willing, and while his strength lasted dangerous, gave a disappointing exhibition, and, after being knocked down twice in quick succession in the seventh round, and saved by the expiration of the three minutes, was unable to respond to the summons for the eighth round, whereupon Carter was declared the winner.

FRANK MARTIN, ALIAS "YOUNG JAMES," and Frank McHenry, both Albany (N. Y.) lads, were principals in a setto at the Whitehall Athletic Club, of that city, May 1, the former being knocked out in the third round, and died without having regained consciousness. The other principal, seconds and other officials were arrested and arraigned in court the following morning, McHenry being sent to jail on a charge of manslaughter, and the others being held for the Special Sessions, on May 9. An autopsy held on the following morning developed the fact that Martin's death was due to heart failure, produced by natural causes.

"KID" MCPARTLAND quickly disposed of clever Jack Bennett, of McKeesport, Pa., when they encountered each other before the Broadway Athletic Club, this city, evening of May 5, having been scheduled to fight twenty-five rounds. Of the twain, Bennett was the superior in point of boxing skill, but he lacks hitting power, and consequently received the lion's share of the punishment up to the fifth round, when he was the recipient of a terrific left handed blow on the mark, which sent him to the floor, where he lay until counted out.

PROF. BILLY MCLEAN, the popular veteran teacher of the art of boxing, has been tendered a complimentary testimonial at the Quaker City Athletic Club, in Philadelphia, on the night of May 15, which will signalize his permanent retirement from the magic circle as an instructor. Volunteers are numerous, and the programme will be lengthy and include a number of prominent millerites. Billy has been in the ring very many years, has always managed to keep his end up in proper style, taking odds from nobody, and he is entitled to a rousing benefit on the occasion of his wind up.

CHARLEY NORTON, who came to this country from Birmingham, Eng., many years ago, and became prominent as a very clever lightweight boxer and an able trainer, died at his residence in Newark, N. J., on Wednesday night, May 3, after a long illness. For years past he had been proprietor of a public house in Newark, which was frequented by sporting men and his countrymen. He leaves a widow and three daughters.

BOBBY DOBBS, the Yankee fighter, and Jerry Driscoll, the "ex-naval champion," have been matched to fight twenty rounds, for $1,000 and a purse, before the National Sporting Club, in London, the fight to be decided during Derby week, and on the same night in which Ben Jordan and Harry Greenfield try conclusions for $3,500 and the featherweight championship.

JACK MCCLELLAND AND EDDIE GARDNER, a brother to Oscar, were opposed in a boxing bout, limited to the customary twenty rounds, before the Metropolitan Athletic Club, of Wheeling, W. Va., night of May 1, the verdict being in favor of McClelland, when Oscar Gardner violated the rules by invading the ring to save his brother in the twentieth round, when he was receiving severe punishment.

JACK FARRELL administered a severe castigation to Elwood McCloskey in a fifteen round fight before the Empire Athletic Club, of Wilmington, Del., night of May 4, the colored boxer having the upper hand all the way through, and receiving the decision at the end.

EDDIE BURNS proved the victor in a twenty round fight with Joe Young at the Olympic Athletic Club, Buffalo, N. Y., on the evening of May 1, the fighting being satisfactory to the large crowd from beginning to end, and the result being decided on the basis of points.

BILL DOHERTY defeated Mick Dooley in the sixth round of a glove fight for the championship of Australia and the gate money, at the Miners' Institute, Kalgoorlie, on Feb. 25. Doherty scaled 172lb, while Dooley lowered the beam at 196lb.

WALTER EYLES vanquished A. J. Francis in a twenty round bout for $450, at a hall in Bath, Eng., night of April 24, the men being very willing, and each doing good work, but that of Eyles was the better, and accordingly he was given the verdict.

TED MARLOW AND JIM BARRY, both of London town, met before the National Sporting Club, in the British metropolis, night of April 24, and fought twenty rounds, for $500 a side and a purse, the former being declared the winner of a good milt.

The Turf.

THE METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.

Won in Convincing Style by Filigrane, the Favorite; Ethelbert Second, Sanders Third—A Great Crowd Witnesses a Fine Card, Inaugurating the Jockey Club's Classic Season.

Saturday afternoon, May 6, a crowd of nearly, if not quite, fifteen thousand turf enthusiasts journeyed to the handsome track of the Westchester Racing Association, to witness the opening card of the annual Spring meeting, the customary feature of which was the running of the Metropolitan Handicap. Shortly after 4 o'clock the candidates, fourteen in number, lined up for the start, and, after two breaks, got away to a fair start, with Algol showing the way. Previous was close behind, Sanders next, and St. Cloud following. They had pretty well settled into their places when a quarter had been run, and Sanders was out in front. He had but a head the advantage of Filigrane, however, while Ethelbert was a length behind, a neck in front of St. Cloud. The half mile was reached in 49s., a fast pace, and Sanders was still sticking to the lead by a length. Down to the last furlong pole went the leaders, with the jockeys driving hard. Sims and Sanders were still in front. Ethelbert was almost at his throat latch, a furlong from home, and was gaining with every stride. It was but for an instant, when the all-scarlet jacket of Clawson on Filigrane flashed by them as if they were standing still, and the race was over. The struggle for second place was interesting, as Ethelbert managed to get it away from Sanders by the hardest kind of work with but a head to the good. Imp. was back in fourth place and the rest were strung out through a sixteenth of a mile. The time, 1:39⅘, was a new record for the track. Summary:

Baseball.

THOMAS H. CONNOLLY,

One of the umpires of the National League and American Association, has had abundant opportunity to show his ability as a judge and disciplinarian since joing the fastest company known to the national game. He gained his knowledge as an official in the New England League, where he served several seasons as the autocrat who culls out the bad balls from the good ones, and came into the larger organization fully prepared to withstand the hardships that surround that onerous position. He was born Dec. 31, 1870, at Manchester, Eng., and there obtained his schooling. At the age of thirteen he came to this country, going to relatives at South Natick, Mass. From 1886 to 1892 he worked at shoemaking at Natick. Becoming interested in the national pastime, from 1888 to 1892 he managed the Natick team, and very successfully. In 1892 he turned his attention to umpiring. He was appointed a substitute umpire of the New England League by Secretary Morse, but did not get a fair chance to display his ability in that line. It was through the earnest solicitation of Tim Hurst that Connolly was afterwards appointed regularly on the staff. After six weeks' experience he was so disgusted that he wanted to quit, but, being urged to stick, he went back to his post, and from that time his success was unquestioned. He remained with the New England League long enough to endear himself to the public, the officers, managers and even the players, which is the greatest encomium that could be bestowed upon him. Early last year considerable influence was brought to bear upon President Young, and he appointed Connolly to the official staff of the major league. He has tact, judgment, firmness, a good voice and knows his business.

MAJOR LEAGUE.

The New Yorks Do Poorly In Their Crippled Condition—Results of Games Played.

New York vs. Philadelphia.

The New Yorks put up a sharp, snappy game May 2, at the Polo Ground, this city, which was strongly flavored with the essence of ginger, and the mixture proved too cogent a dose for the peaceful Quakers. It was just the kind of ball that should win games for them from any team who opposes them. There was stubborn grit displayed from start to finish that convinced the faithful supporters of the club that they would get a run for their money. Captain Doyle made his reappearance with the team, and it was plainly evident that his presence was felt by the rest of the players. Doyle is a hustler, and when in playing condition he is in the game for all it is worth, and that means win if they can. His presence always inspires the other men, and gives them a confidence they do not otherwise have. George Davis was still too badly injured to take part in the game, but he had an able substitute in Parke Wilson, who is proving himself a capable utility man. He is always ready to go in and fill any position, and has done so in a very creditable manner. He was one of the bright, particular stars in this contest. He was quick on his feet, was accurate in throwing, and always knew just what to do, being in the right place at the right time. Colcolough pitched for the New Yorks, and, while he did nothing particularly brilliant, his work was not of that mediocre order that has followed his fortunes in the past. He was batted rather freely, but was generally quite effective where hits would have proven damaging to New York's prospects for a victory. He was hit safely ten times, including a double bagger by Douglas, gave two bases on balls and struck out four men. Frazer occupied the pitcher's position for the Phillies, and he had a various assortment of styles in his repertory, but failed to bring a winning delivery with him. Some of his shoots, drops and curves were very appetizing, especially those served in the fourth and sixth innings, as they brought profitable returns to the local team. He was batted safely ten times, gave one base on balls, made a wild pitch and struck out four men. New York made two fielding errors and the Phillies five. The game was called at the end of the first half of the eighth inning on account of darkness. Time of game, 1h. 50m. The score:

Philadelphia	1	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	—3
New York	0	0	0	2	0	2	0	—	4

The New Yorks must not be expected to win every game. If they did it would soon become so monotonous that there would be no interest in their contests. Then, too, they are not the only team that loses occasionally; what is the matter with Cincinnati? Louisville, Washington, Cleveland and Pittsburg, also win once in awhile. The final game of this series between the New Yorks and Philadelphias was played May 3, and was won by the latter. Just how it happened is plain enough for even the blind to see. The Phillies put up a better all around game than did the locals. Beside this, the New Yorks tried an experiment on the visitors, which, had it worked all right, would have brought things their way, but it didn't, and there you are. Fishel, a pitcher with a Weehawken reputation, was sent in to "do" the heavy hitters from the City of Brotherly Love, but it was a case of "them seeing him first." Mr. Fishel was batted safely nine times, gave six bases on balls, hit two other batsmen with pitched balls, made a wild pitch and struck out six men. His poor control proved very costly for the home team, as it greatly aided the visitors in winning. Fifield was not much steadier than Fishel, but he was more effective at critical times. He was batted safely eight times, including a double bagger by Gleason, gave six bases on balls, and struck out one man. There were other things beside the ones above mentioned that aided in defeating the New Yorks, but want of space prevents us from entering fully into all the details. Lajoie, of the Phillies, played brilliantly, accepting all of eleven chances at second base. Gleason and Hartman, of the home team, also fielded well. Time of game, 2h. 15m. The score:

Washington vs. Brooklyn.

The Brooklyns let out a few kinks on May 2, at Washington, D. C., just to let the locals see that they have something in reserve which will be used when necessity demands it. The hot pace set by the home team in the opening games called for a little vehement action on the part of the visitors, and compelled them to open their cold storage boxes and dish out a few chunks of that kind of ball calculated to win in any kind of a contest, and land them across the wire at the finish in the van of the procession. The fast pace set by the Brooklyns proved too much for the Washingtons, completely disconcerting them, and when they recovered their equanimity they discovered that they had failed to gather any runs as they reeled off inning after inning in their reckless race. Pitcher Hughes, the young man "discovered in the wilds of California" by Hughie Jennings, last Winter a year ago, did the pitching for the team from the City of Churches, and he proved himself a pastmaster in the art of "twirling the sphere." He had superb control and pitched with great effect at critical stages. He allowed the locals only four scattering singles, gave four bases on balls and struck out one man. Baker, of the home team, was batted safely seven times, including a home run by McGann and a triple bagger by Dahlen, gave two bases on balls, hit two other batsmen with pitched balls, made a balk and struck out one man. The Brooklyns fielded faultlessly, while the Washingtons were charged with four errors. Daly and Dahlen were star performers in the field. Some of their plays were of the sensational order. Time of game, 1h. 40m. The score:

Brooklyn	3	0	1	0	0	1	0	2	—7

The Brooklyns had a close call on May 3, but so long as they connected the laugh is not against them. The visitors pinned their faith in Pitcher Kennedy, and, although he ran a pretty race with Pitcher Dunkie, of the home team, it was not a case of misplaced confidence. Big "Bill," the blonde headed Ohian, was at his best, and despite the fact that four errors were made behind him he prevented the locals from scoring more than a single run, and allowed them only three scattering singles. He gave two bases on balls and struck out two men. Dunkie, too, did great work in the pitcher's position, holding the visitors down to six safe hits, including double baggers by Kelley and Daly, he gave five bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out four men. Dahlen, of Brooklyn, made some sensational plays at short, and each of his two safe hits sent in a run. Alex. Smith, also of Brooklyn, was knocked out in the third inning. Gettman, of the home team, in trying to score on Mercer's slow grounder to Daly, ran into him at the home plate, and Farrell had to replace him. McGann, Brooklyn's first baseman, came near taking a few days' rest. A swift, wild pitched ball caught him on the side of the head, and he fell as if hit with one of the Oregon's thirteen inch shells. In a few minutes, however, he recovered and resumed play. The Wasoingtons were charged with only one error against four for Brooklyn. The game was limited to eight innings on account of darkness. Time of game, 2h. The score:

Baltimore vs. Boston.

After being unceremoniously beaten twice by the Baltimores the champion Bostons thought the time was ripe for them to take matters into their own hands, and dole out "justice" as they saw it. Consequently on May 2, at Baltimore, Md., they administered a severe rebuff to the adventurous oyster diggers. It was an interesting contest until the ninth inning, when the locals went kiteing and gathered a bunch of errors, allowing the visitors to score four runs without making a safe hit. Miller, of the home team, pitched a much better game than the result shows, and had his support been perfect the Bostons would not have had such an easy time in winning. Nichols was not at his best, but still he pitched winning ball, allowing the Baltimores seven safe hits, including double baggers by O'Brien and Lachance, gave four bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out three men. Miller was hit safely ten times, and gave three men their base on balls. The Bostons made only one fielding error and Baltimore five. Time of game, 1h. 45m. The score:

Boston	0	0	2	0	2	0	1	0	4—9

The final contest of the opening series between these teams, played May 3, was a battle to death between Pitchers Hickman and McGinnity, with both of them doing effective work. Errors behind the latter were chiefly responsible for the victory gained by the Bostons. The visitors put up a faultless fielding game, Long and Lowe being very conspicuous in this respect, accepting all of fifteen chances at short and second base, respectively. The Baltimores fielded brilliantly at times, even though they were charged with three errors, all of which proved costly. McGinnity was batted safely by the Bostons five times, including a double bagger by Tenney. He made a wild pitch and struck out one man. Hickman allowed the Baltimores four safe hits, including doubles by Brodie and Magoon, gave three bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out four men. Time of game, 1h. 37m. The score:

Cleveland vs. Louisville.

These teams broke even in the double header played on the afternoon of May 2, at Cleveland, O. The opening game was nip and tuck, with the result in doubt until the last man went out in the ninth inning, and Louisville was declared the winnere, because it had gathered one more run than had the home team during the progress of the game, which was full of excitement from start to finish. The visitors batted hard enough throughout to have scored twice as many runs as they did, but could not bunch their hits sufficiently to get larger returns. Sockalexis, the once famous Indian, made his appearance, and batted for Carsey in the ninth inning. Carsey was batted safely by the visitors ten times, including a double bagger by Clarke, gave two bases on balls and struck out one man. Phillipi held the locals down to five safe hits, including a triple bagger by Sullivan, gave two bases on balls and struck out two men. The Louisvilles made only one fielding error, against three charged to the home team. Quinn, of the Clevelands, put up a strong game at second base, accepting all of eleven chances. Time of game, 1h. 30m. The score:

Louisville	0	0	1	0	2	0	0	0	—3

The second game went to the home team, and it was closely contested until the eighth inning, when the locals bunched enough hits to score four and take a lead they easily held until the end. The Louisvilles batted hard enough to win, but their hits were not gathered in sufficient numbers to give good results. The Clevelands made only one more safe hit than was credited to the visitors, yet they made almost twice as many runs as the Louisvilles. The Clevelands bunched their hits in two innings, and scored eight of the nine runs credited to them. Magee was batted safely by the home team twelve times, including a triple bagger by Sudhoff and doubles by Harley and Tucker, gave two bases on balls and struck out two men. The Louisvilles made eleven safe hits, including double baggers by Wagner and Decker, and struck out two men. In this contest the Clevelands outfielded the visitors, making only one fielding error against three charged to the latter. Time of game, 1h. 45m. The score:

Cleveland	0	0	4	0	1	0	0	4	0—9
Louisville	0	2	2	0	0	0	1	0	0—5

Cincinnati vs. St. Louis.

There was weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth among the natives over the Rhine, for anguish, and despite, and shame had seized them all because "Patsy" Tebeau's braves had swooped down upon them, slaughtered them and put them to flight. All this happened on May 3, at Cincinnati, O., when the above named teams met for the opening game of their series. St. Louis won by playing better all around ball. Hawley proved an easy mark for the visitors, who took advantage of his weakness to fatten their batting averages. He was hit safely thirteen times, including a triple bagger by Tebeau and a double by McKean, gave three bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out one man. Powell did much better work in the pitcher's position, and although he was hit quite hard in the first four innings, he prevented the locals from making more than a single run off the seven safe hits, including a triple and double by Steinfeldt. Besides this he gave two bases on balls. The visitors made only one fielding error against five charged to the home team. The fielding of Childs and McKean was excellent. The former accepted all of nine chances at second base, and the latter seven out of eight at short. Time of game, 2h. The score:

St. Louis	3	0	0	0	0	2	2	2	0—9
Cincinnati	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0—1

Driven to sheer desperation, like the worm, they turned and struck back. This was the Cincinnatis case when they met the Mound City conquerers on May 5. The locals jumped on Pitcher "Cy." Young and pounded him hard from start to finish, causing him to lose his first game of the season. They batted him safely thirteen times, including double baggers by Smith and Peitz, and he struck out one man. Hahn, the young Western League recruit, astonished everybody, himself included. He pitched great ball, having all kinds of command, and they proved as deceptive as the Philippine commission. He had Tebeau's men guessing after the first inning, when they drew nothing but blanks. He allowed them four safe hits, including a double bagger by McKean, gave one base on balls, and struck out five men. The St. Louis team made only two fielding errors, while Cincinnati was charged with three. Smith, of the home team, led in batting with three safe hits. Time of game, 1h. 55m. The score:

St. Louis	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—2

The St. Louis men lined up against the Cincinnati's on May 6, with the most disastrous results that have yet been their lot to meet thus far this season. All his vain boast about reversing the above result on this occasion went for naught. Jones proved the easiest kind of a mark for the home team, and when the battle was over they had gathered fifteen safe hits, including a triple bagger by Corcoran and doubles by Miller, Beckley, Steinfeldt and Pietz off him. Beside this he gave four bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out three men. Dammann, of the home team, was also touched up quite frequently, but was so effective at critical stages that the visitors could not score, although they made eleven safe hits, including a double bagger by Heidrich, off his delivery. He gave only one base on balls and struck out two men. Cincinnati made only one error and St. Louis three. Time of game, 1h. 40m. The score:

Cincinnati	0	2	0	0	5	1	1	2	—11
St. Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0— 0

"How uncertain baseball is," said one of the faithful rooters after the game between these teams on May 7. "Yesterday Cincinnati beat them 11 to 0, and had them beaten today until the ninth inning, when they go in and win out." That is just what makes baseball so popular with the masses. There is nothing absolutely certain about it. A team may win right along from the strongest ones and then be beaten by an apparently weaker one. It has always been the case and will continue so as long as the game is played. Breitenstein was practically invincible for eight innings, allowing the visitors only three safe hits from which they scored one run. In the ninth, however, they bunched two singles and a double by Blake, which, with an error by the locals, netted them three runs and gave them a victory with only one hand out. Breitenstein was batted safely six times, gave one base on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out one man. The home team batted Powell safely nine times, including a double bagger by Selbach, gave three bases on balls and struck out one man. The visitors put up a faultless fielding game, while Cincinnati was charged with three errors. Childs, of St. Louis, accepted all of eleven chances at second base. Time of game, 1h. 50m. The score:

Pittsburg vs. St. Louis.

The most exciting game seen in Pittsburg, Pa., in many a day was played by the above named teams, May 2, and resulted in a victory for the locals, despite the disgraceful conduct on the part of the visitors, and the apparently unfair work of the umpires. It was full of incidents. Pitcher Gardner, of the home team, had a hand split during the fourth inning and had to retire, Sparks succeeding him; Bowerman was put out of the game for having too much to say to Umpire Smith; O'Connor was taken from the bench by policemen off the ground at the request of Umpire Burns; several St. Louis players were fined, and the scene closed with a yelling and jeering crowd following the umpires to the dressing room, but offering no violence. It was St. Louis' last appearance in Pittsburg until Aug. 5, next, but it is hardly likely that any of those present will soon forget what happened, and will likely remind the visitors of these facts on their next appearance in the Smoky City. St. Louis made nine safe hits, including a triple bagger, off Pittsburg's two pitchers; Gardner gave two bases on balls and Sparks gave four. The latter struck out two men. Jones, of the visitors, was batted safely thirteen time, including a triple bagger by Clark and a two baser by Reitz, gave one base on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out four men. Pittsburg fielded faultlessly, while only one error was charged to the visitors. Time of game, 2h. 20m. The score:

St. Louis	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0—3
Pittsburg	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	1—4

Cleveland vs. Chicago.

It took the Chicagos ten innings before they succeeded in downing the Clevelands on May 3, at Cleveland, O. The ex-Browns put up a fight that was worthy of a better cause. The ball they played should win two games out of every three, but, unfortunately, for them, this happened to be the odd one, and the visitors took it by bunching their hits in the tenth inning and scoring three runs, thereby breaking the tie that caused the extra inning to be played. The Clevelands had the better of it by two runs at the close of the fifth inning, but the Chicagos added two to their credit in the seventh, evening matters up, and thus they stood until the tenth inning, when they took undue liberties with Pitcher Stivetts' delivery and three runs resulted. Cleveland failed to connect in their half of the tenth. Stivetts was batted safely eleven times, including double baggers by Ryan, Green, Wolverton and Lange, gave four bases on balls and struck out two men. The Clevelands made nine safe hits, including doubles by Dowd, Quinn and Stivetts, off Taylor, who gave two bases on balls and struck out one man. The Clevelands made one fielding error and Chicago three. Time of game, 1h. 50m. The score tions on May 6, and like in the three preceding encounters the Clevelands took the short end of the result without as much as a protest. It has come to be such a natural thing to be beaten so often that the job lot from the Forest City would hardly know what happened if it should result otherwise. The castoff batted just as hard as did the home team, but their batting came in such an unsteady way that they did not reap the full benefit of their good work in that respect. Then, too, they put up a better fielding game than did the Chicagos, being charged with only three errors against five for the latter. The Clevelands made eleven safe hits, including double baggers by Dowd and Cross, off Taylor, who gave one base on balls and struck out one man. The Chicagos gathered eleven safe hits, including a triple bagger by De Montreville, off Hill, who gave two bases on balls, hit a batsman with a pitched ball, and struck out two men. A rattling double play on a long throw by Ryan, of the home team, in deep left field to first base, was a fielding feature that brought out a long round of applause. Dowd put up a great fielding game for the visitors, accepting all of seven chances in centre field. Quinn and Everitt led their respective teams in batting, each making three safe hits. Time of game, 1h. 45m. The score:

Chicago	3	2	1	0	3	0	0	1	—10

The Clevelands made a desperate effort to win at least one game of this series from the Chicagos when they met on May 8, rain having caused a postponement of the game scheduled for the day before, but everything seemed to go against them. They were weakened considerably by having their manager and third baseman, Lave Cross, ordered out of the game for questioning decisions given by the umpires. McCormick, of the home team, was hit with a pitched ball and had to retire, Connor succeeding him. The visitors tied the score in the sixth inning, took the lead in the seventh, and increased it two runs in the eighth. The Chicagos had three runs to get to win when they went to the bat in the last half of the ninth. With one man out and two on the bases Wolverton drove the ball over the score board at the further end of the field for a home run, sending in two men ahead of him. The visitors outbatted and outfielded the locals, and yet they could not win. They made thirteen safe hits, including double baggers by Tucker, Sullivan and Bristow, off Griffith, who hit a batsman with a pitched ball. The Chicagos batted Sudhoff safely nine times, including the home run above mentioned, and a two baser by Lange. He gave three bases on balls, hit two more batsmen with pitched balls and struck out three men. The Clevelands made two fielding errors and Chicago six. Time of game, 2h. The score:

Cleveland	0	0	0	0	1	3	1	2	0—7
Chicago.....	0	1	0	1	0	2	0	1	3—8

Pittsburg vs. Louisville.

The glorious uncertainties of the national game were fully exemplified at Pittsburg, Pa., May 3, when the home team snatched a victory out of the fire, as it were, at the ninth hour. It looked like Louisville's game when the locals came to the bat in the last half of the ninth inning, with the score standing 6 to 1 against them, but the Pittsburgs made a finish the equal of which has happened before at rare intervals, and had never previously been seen in that city. Two singles, two errors and two outs gave the locals three runs. Then, with a man on base, McCarthy rapped out a long one to right field that netted him a home run, sending in a run ahead of him and tieing the score. McCreery followed with another drive into left field for a homer, and won the game. Up to the ninth inning, Dowling, although not well supported, held the Pittsburgs down to one run and four safe hits. He seemed to be worried over the misplays behind him, and virtually went to pieces, and the locals took advantage of his embarrassment and won out. Dowling was batted safely eight times, gave two bases on balls, and struck out one man. The Louisvilles made seven safe hits, including triple baggers by Decker and Clingman, and doubles by Wagner (twice) and Ritchey, off Tannehill; beside this he gave one base on balls, and struck out three men. Wagner led in batting, making four of the seven safe hits credited to the visitors. The Louisvilles made five fielding errors and Pittsburg two. Time of game, 1h. 50m. The score:

Louisville.....	0	1	0	3	0	0	2	0	0—6
Pittsburg.....	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	6—7

These teams put up a game on May 4 that gave the spectators a run for their money. It required ten innings before a result was reached. It was full of dash, snap and vim from start to finish, and was anybody's game until the last man went out in the tenth inning. The Louisvilles outbatted the home team, but what the latter lacked in that respect it more than made up in fielding, as it put up a faultless game in that respect, while the visitors were charged with two errors. Woods, of the Louisvilles, was in fine form, and allowed the locals only one safe hit up to the seventh inning, when they made four and scored two runs. In the ninth inning Clark of the home team rapped out a three bagger and ran home on a wild throw by Clingman, his run tieing the score. In the tenth Dexter singled, and was advanced to second and third on the following two outs, and scored what proved the winning run on a safe hit by Ritchey. Woods was batted safely seven times, while the Louisvilles made ten safe hits, including a triple bagger by Hoy, off Hoffer, who gave five bases on balls, hit two batsmen with pitched balls and struck out one man. Time of game, 2h. The score:

An error and a home run drive played an important part in the victory gained by the home team on May 5. It was a well contested game up to the eighth inning, with honors evenly divided. In the eighth, however, with two men out, Clingman, third baseman of the Louisvilles, fumbled an easy grounder sent to him by Leever, and Donovan followed with a home run drive, sending in Leever ahead of him, giving the locals a lead of two runs that they easily held, as the visitors failed to score after that. The Pittsburgs outplayed the Louisvilles both at the bat and in the field, but the latter were much more lively in base running. The locals batted Philippi safely eleven times, including a home run, already mentioned, and doubles by Reitz and Williams; he gave one base on balls and struck out one man. Leever was batted safely ten times by the visitors, including a triple bagger by Ritchey and a two baser by Decker. He gave four bases on balls and struck out one man. The home team made only one fielding error and the visitors made three. Time of game, 2h. 20m. The score:

Louisville.....	2	0	0	0	0	1	2	0	0—5

This series of games has demonstrated one fact, and that is how well these teams are matched. On May 6 they had another encounter and eleven innings were necessary before a result was reached. For ten innings it was closely contested. At that time each team had three runs to its credit. In the eleventh, however, the locals furnished another of those unlooked for things that happen only at rare intervals, but has occurred twice in this series. They jumped in at the last moment and batted in runs enough to give them an apparently easy victory. This spasmodic style of batting may be all right, but there is no use in driving the club's supporters to the verge of despair before developing that streak of stick work. The rescuing of the heroine at the critical moment will do for the stage, but the wresting of a game in the last inning is too apt to bring on cases of heart disease if indulged in too often. Pitcher Payne, who was cast adrift by Brooklyn, has been rescued by Pittsburg, was called upon to turn the trick against the Louisvilles, and, although batted quite freely, he succeeded to the entire satisfaction of his supporters. He was hit safely eleven times, including a triple and a double bagger by Clarke and doubles by Decker and Ritchey, he gave four bases on balls, hit two other batsmen with pitched balls, made a balk, and struck out three men. The locals made twenty safe hits, including triple baggers by McCarthy and Reitz and doubles by Schriver and Williams, the latter making two, most of which were made by Dowling, who was succeeded by Wood in the eleventh inning after five runs had been made off him. Dowling gave two bases on balls and struck out two men. Pittsburg made only one error and Louisville two. Time of game, 2h. 50m. The score:

Louisville.....	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	2—5

Superior batting, well bunched at opportune times, helped the locals to another victory on May 8. Sparks pitched fairly good ball, keeping the hits so well scattered that they netted only three runs during the first six innings; in the seventh the visitors began to gauge his delivery and sent in two more runs. In the eighth Leever succeeded Sparks, and the Louisville's run getting suddenly ceased. Clingman was the first man to face Leever, and he was unfortunately hit with a pitched ball. It caught him on the head and laid him out for a few minutes. He was helped to the dressing room and Woods went into the game for him. Magee started into to pitch for the visitors, but lasted only five innings. He was replaced by Cunningham in the sixth, who was hit safely five times for four runs, but did better after that. The Pittsburgs made fifteen safe hits, including a triple bagger by Donovan and doubles by McCreery and Ely, off Louisville's two pitchers. Magee gave four bases on balls and Cunningham gave three. The latter struck out three men. The Louisvilles batted the local two pitchers safely eight times, including a home run by Decker and a triple bagger by Hoy. Sparks gave six bases on balls, made a wild pitch and struck out one man. Leever gave one base on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out one man. The Louisvilles made only one fielding error and Pittsburg two. Time of game, 2h. 20m. The score:

Pittsburg	1	1	0	0	2	4	0	0	0—8
Louisville.....	0	0	1	1	0	1	2	0	0—5

Brooklyn vs. Boston.

There was a certain desperate recklessness expressed upon the features of the Brooklyn players at one stage of the game with Boston May 4, at Washington Park, Brooklyn, N. Y., but it lasted for a brief moment only and then they lapsed into an unnatural drowsiness that was charming to behold. This happened in the last half of the seventh inning after Boston had scored two runs and taken the lead. The home team went to the bat fully determined to offset this, but they failed in their mission, and everything went Boston's way after that. While the visitors won apparently with ridiculous ease they did not put up the game they are capable of doing, and the Brooklyns played like a lot of dubs from a corner lot. Their batting was weak and their fielding was wretched. Dr. McJames had a fine assortment of shoots, curves and "whatnots," and for seven innings served them out in doses that proved effective, but after that they took his medicine with a relish that completely disconcerted him. He was batted safely ten times, including a home run by Clarke, a triple bagger by Stahl and doubles by Stahl and Long, he gave two bases on balls and struck out two men. Willis did much better work in the pitcher's position than did McJames. The former was batted safely six times, including a double bagger by Casey, gave one base on balls and struck out four men. Boston was charged with three fielding errors and Brooklyn with six. Both Long and Dahlen played brilliantly in the field. Each making some sensational plays at short. Stafford led in batting with three singles. Time of game, 2h. 5m. The score:

The above result was reversed on May 5, when the scene of operation was transferred to Boston, Mass. In fact, the Brooklyns acted as if they had cornered the game, and made frequent "runs" on the Bostons, the latter looking like deuces against a full hand. They even turned the supposed disadvantage to visiting teams occasioned by the locals' patent grounds to their advantage, and bested the champions in every point of playing, in batting, fielding and base running. Hughes was in splendid form, and Boston's great batsmen went down before him like a lot of amateurs. Stafford's home run drive in the sixth inning was the result of the only long safe hit the locals could get. Anderson and Daly also lined out homers; the former's would have been good for four bases on any grounds, on account of its great height and the distance it went. The ball made a beeline for a telegraph pole over beside the railroad track, in deep left field, and struck up among the wires. Keeler led in batting, with three safe drives. Lewis pitched for Boston. It was his first attempt this season, and the visitors made things interesting for him. The way the visitors opened up on him was the best of evidence that he lacked proper training. He was like a mixed ale fighter: he had gone in with too much confidence in his ability to down the great team from the City of Churches. He tossed the ball and the visitors did the rest, or at least they started the ball a rolling to his discomfiture. Lewis was batted safely twelve times. He gave three bases on balls and hit another batsman with a pitched ball. The home team made only six safe hits off Hughes, who gave four bases on balls and struck out four men. The fielding done by the Brooklyns was as good as their batting was hard and continuous. Only one error was charged to them and six to Boston. Time of game, 2h. 18m. The score:

The great Nichols was given a few lessons in the art of batting on May 6 that were extremely novel to him. The Brooklyns were his instructors, and they advanced the most liberal and up to date views on that subject he has received this season. They went at him with a confidence that was astonishing to behold, got the range of the short left field fence, and the result was that the ball was sent sailing over it for a home run whenever it did the most good. One of these events happened in the tenth inning, giving the visitors two runs, one more than enough to win. It was a long drawn out, heavy hitting and tedious affair, requiring ten innings before a result was reached. Just to think, fourteen safe hits for a total of twenty-four bases off Nichols, and seventeen for a total of nineteen off Kennedy, gives an idea of how the time was spent during the two hours and fifteen minutes the struggle lasted. Kennedy had the home team guessing up to the ninth inning, when they stopped their conjecturing, and went at him for keeps. When the scrimmage was over the Bostons had piled up seven runs and tied the score. Hit followed hit so rapidly that Kennedy stood like one in a trance, and wondered where he was at. In the last half of the tenth innings, the locals, after one man had been put out, again opened up on Kennedy with two singles, then Captain Kelley sent him to the bench and substituted Yeager, who quickly retired the side. Nichols was batted safely fourteen times, including home runs by Dahlen, Anderson and Farrell and a two baser by Daly; gave two bases on balls, made a wild pitch, and struck out two men. Kennedy was batted safely by the home team seventeen times, including two double baggers by Bergen, and gave three men their base on balls. The visitors made three fielding errors, against five charged to the home team. Bergen made his reappearance with the local team, and gave frequent exhibitions of what would happen to adventurous base stealers. Long's work at short was good and bad in spots; he accepted all except two of fifteen chances. Time of game, 2h. 15m. The score:

Brooklyn..	0	3	4	0	0	0	0	1	2	2—12
Boston.....	0	0	0	0	3	0	0	0	7	0—10

The Brooklyns went in on May 8 to make it three straight victories over the champions, but things did not work as mapped out. The way the game ended looked as if the Bostons meant to give them a warning not to be so ambitious when next visiting the Hub. Three straight defeats is more than the locals could stand, especially at home. Hughes, of Brooklyn, pitched clever ball; in one inning only was he batted freely, but enough runs were made then to win with apparent ease. Boston's run in the first inning was a gift through slow fielding, although no errors were actually made. In fact, the only fielding error charged went to the credit of the home team. There was lots of luck in Boston's run getting, but, as more or less of that commodity figures in every game, it is pretty generally conceded that the victor gets the larger part of it. Willis, too, pitched gilt edged ball. He had great speed and was practically invincible when hits were needed to send in runs. He allowed the visitors five scattering safe hits, including a double bagger by McGann, gave two bases on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out one man. The Bostons made seven safe hits, including double baggers by Stahl, Long and Collins, off Hughes, who gave two bases on balls and struck out one man. Time of game, 1h. 42m. The score:

Baltimore vs. Philadelphia.

It was said that Pitcher Kitson weakened in the ninth inning of the game between the Baltimore and Philadelphia teams May 4, at Baltimore, Md., and the visitors pounded in five runs and won. Mr. Kitson has yet to give his version of the matter. It was certainly not a pitcher's contest, in fact, neither Kitson or Platt has any particular reason to feel proud of his work in the pitcher's position. Both were wild and ineffective at times, but Platt had the good fortune to be the more effective when in a tight place. The majority of Baltimore's runs were started from clean gifts by Platt, who appeared at times to be unable to get the ball over the home plate. His excellent support, however, enabled him to pull out of several ball holes and kept down the home team score. Platt was batted safely twelve times, he gave four bases on balls, hit three other batsmen with pitched balls and struck out two men. Kitson was also rapped safely a dozen times, including a triple bagger by Lajoie and a triple and a double by Flick, he gave two bases on balls, hit a batsman with a pitched ball and struck out four men. The Baltimores made four fielding errors while the Phillies were charged with only one. It was a long drawn out contest requiring 2h. 30m. before the end came. The score:

Philadelphia.....	2	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	5—	10
Balimore.....	0	1	1	1	0	0	0	3	0—	6

The Phillies again won on May 5, but they did not have as easy a time as on the day before. For eight innings they fairly ran away with the game, leaving the locals at the post; but, like the proverbial hare and tortoise, the Phillies came near being beating out at the finish. The final inning furnished the only real excitement of the entire contest, which otherwise was rather tame. Lachance had bad luck in being injured twice with the ball; in the fifth inning he was temporarily knocked out by a pitched ball, which hit him on the kneecap. He revived in a few minutes and resumed play. In the seventh Magoon hit a ball to third base as Lachance was stealing second; Lander got the ball and threw to second to head off Lachance, but it caught him squarely on the cheek and sent him to the ground as if hit by a club. The game was delayed for a few minutes and then Chrisham took Lachance's place. The Phillies found Nops' delivery for thirteen safe drives, including a double bagger by Delehanty; he gave two bases on balls and struck out one man. Wheeler was batted safely nine times, including a triple bagger by Holmes, gave three men their base on balls, hit another batsman with a pitched ball and struck out two men. The Baltimores made only one fielding error and the Phillies four. Time of game, 2h. 10m. The score:

Philadelphia.....	3	0	1	0	0	0	2	0	0—	6
Baltimore.....	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	2—	4

The Baltimores succeeded in wresting a game from the Philadelphias on May 6, when the scene of action was changed to Philadelphia, Pa., after two failures to do so at home. The visitors outplayed the Quakers in every department and made them look like a lot of sand hillers. No less than fourteen players were used on the local team, but had twice that many been put in active operation all at one time it is doubtful if they could have beaten the Baltimores, who had their batting clothes on and hit the ball for keep and always at the right time. The errors made by the Phillies contributed materially to the visitors' success, Cross being the chief offender in this line; the two errors made by him proved very costly. Baltimore made two runs in the second inning and then clinched the game by adding five more in the third; that settled the result so far as the locals were concerned. The visitors made eleven safe hits off the Phillies' trio of pitchers; Frazer, who started the ball rolling, gave way to Donahue after the third inning, and the latter was succeeded by Bernhard in the eighth. Frazer gave three bases on balls and Bernhard two. Beside one of the visiting batsmen was hit with a pitched ball. Baltimore tried two pitchers, Miller and McGinnity. Eleven safe hits were made off them. Miller gave three bases on balls, made a wild pitch and struck out one man. McGinnity gave four bases on balls; beside this a local batsman was hit with a pitched ball. The long safe hits were double baggers by Brodie, Sheckard, Keister and Delehanty. The Phillies were charged with making five fielding errors and the Baltimores only one. Time of game, 2h. 12m. The score:

Baltimore.....	0	2	5	0	0	0	3	1	0—11
Philadelphia..	0	0	2	0	0	0	1	0	0— 3

New York vs. Washington.

That aggregation from Washington commonly called the "Senators" have descended upon Manhattan Island to "investigate" the conduct of the New Yorks. Dame rumor had announced that the local club was to be dropped from the major league, and that one run in the interest of the "combine" would succeed it. If this is the case the "Senators" failed to discover any facts. Their first session was held May 5, at the Polo Grounds, this city, and, although there was a lively time while it lasted, they gained nothing, nor did they uncover any inside workings. True, Associate Judge Andrews stired up a hornets' nest at one stage of the proceedings, but his ruling was against the "Senators" and in favor of the home team. There was a small attendance at the opening session, but it is hoped that the crowds will increase as the work proceeds and becomes more interesting. It was given out by a member of the combine that these "sessions" will be held on and off all Summer, and that the major league will bear the expense. The Washingtons started off like winners, taking a lead of three to nothing in the first two innings, and kept in the van until the ninth inning, when, by a grand uphill rally on the part of the locals who scored three runs, the visitors were beaten by a small margin. New York's first run came in the third inning, and so did the trouble, which ended in Second Baseman Padden, of the Washingtons, being sent to the bench by Assistant Umpire Andrews for having too much to say. Padden was succeeded by Latham, the erstwhile clown of the profession. The trouble came over a play at first base that Padden had helped to make, but which the umpire decided was not completed in time to be allowed as an out. Weyhing pitched great ball until the ninth inning, when his measure was correctly taken. He was batted safely nine times, gave two bases on balls and struck out four men. Doheny was also in good form. He was batted safely eight times, gave five bases on balls and struck out five men. Each team was charged with making two fielding errors. Time of game, 2h. 5m. The score:

Washington....	1	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	0—4
New York.....	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	3—5

The New Yorks put up as great an article of ball on May 6 as one would wish to see. It was of that kind that helps to win pennants, but the victories must not be too far between. Yet when all things are taken into consideration the New Yorks did exceedingly well. Their entire team has not taken the field in a championship contest this season, and despite this they have won pretty nearly as many games as they have lost. It is a record they need not be ashamed of. True, they had only one of the tailenders for an opponant, but a victory off it counts just as much as one off a leader. Pitcher Seymour, one of the "hold outs," came down from Albany on May 6 and wanted to do business with President Freedman, of the New York Club, but the latter was not ready to accept the proposition submitted by the player, and the latter left for his homea sadder but wiser man. Seymour, like Rusie, feels that he has a grievance, and he will not sign until his terms have been accepted, and there the matter rests for the present, as neither one will give in. Meekin pitched against the Washingtons on this occasion and he was in excellent form, allowing the visitors seven safe hits, including a two bagger by Padden, gave two basses on balls, hit two more batsmen with pitched balls and struck out one man. While the face of the score shows that Dineen, of the visitors, did better work in the pitcher's position than did Meekin, the latter was the more effective at critical times, as he was credited with the victory. Dineen held the locals down to six safe hits, including a double bagger by Meekin, and gave only one base on balls, which showed the excellent control he had. George Davis made his reappearance with the team, and played a steady game at short. Doyle and Tiernan were still absent. The former is sorely missed, although Wilson put up a great game at first base in his stead. A double play, unassisted, by Wilson, was a fielding feature. Each team was credited with two fielding errors. Time of game, 1h. 47m. The score:

New York.....	2	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	—3

The New Yorks tried a Garrison finish on the Washingtons May 8, and it worked most admirably. Up to the eighth inning it was a great race, head and head, each trying to shove its nose over the wire in the lead. There was snap and dash in the work of both teams, and each was making a wonderful effort for a victory. The pace told on the visitors, however, for when they reached the three-quarter pole they weakened perceptibly, and the New Yorks raced to the front with a good lead they easily held to the end. The locals played a much better fielding game than did their opponents, making only one error, while the latter were charged with five. Doheny pitched good ball, and in only one inning—the fifth—could the visitors bunch enough hits to do any scoring, they then making four singles, which netted them their only two runs. The home team batted more judiciously, making their hits when they did the most good. This was especially the case in the eighth inning, when all kinds of safe hits were made. Doheny was batted safely nine times, gave two bases on balls, made a wild pitch and struck out five men. The locals made eleven safe hits, including double baggers by George Davis, Gleason and Doheny, off McFarlan, who gave three bases on balls, made a wild pitch and struck out one man. Time of game, 2h. 10m. The score:

Samuel Powell, while officiating as umpire in a game between picked nines of local players May 1, at Lowndesborough, a village near Birmingham, Ala., was killed by Frank McCoy, one of the players, during a dispute over a decision. The teams were known as the Reds and the Blues. Powell was a partisan of the Reds, but up to the seventh inning his decisions were satisfactory to both teams. In that inning, with two men on the bases, Frank McCoy made a home run and, chasing home the men on bases, the Blues gained three runs. Umpire Powell decided the hit a foul and ordered the men to the bases and McCoy back to the bat. A quarrel followed between McCoy and Powell over the fairness of the decision, in which the player was so abusive that the umpire knocked him down. Jumping to his feet, McCoy seized a bat and hit the umpire, fracturing his skull. Powell dropped on the home plate dead.

Jack Boyle, the well known ball player, was the subject of a surgical operation May 4, at Cincinnati, O., that resulted in a startling discovery. Dr. Walker, in probing the left shoulder of the ball player, found imbedded in the flesh near the bone the broken blade of a knife. About six months ago Boyle, while on his way home near midnight, was attacked from behind by an unknown man who, before the ball player could defend himself, plunged a knife into his shoulder, making an ugly wound, but as it healed rapidly nothing more was thought of it until some time later when the arm began to trouble him. Boyle will soon be able to play ball again.

James L. Clinton Jr. would like to get an engagement with some miner league team. He feels that he has been treated shabbily by T. L. Reilly, of the New Haven Club, of the Connecticut State League. Reilly signed him during the latter part of March, and held him until May 4, and then notified him that he had been released, saying: "I have signed so many men during the past few days that I had to cut down my list." He had several offers while under engagement to the New Haven Club, all of which he had to decline. Now the teams are all made up, and he finds it hard to get an engagement. He can play very acceptably at second base, but is more at home in the outfield.

Hugh Cavanagh was killed by a pitched ball during the game between the Washington Athletic team, of Montclair, N. J., and the Emerald Athletic Club team, of Newark, at Montclair, May 6. The ball was delivered by L. Franklin Titcher, pitcher of the Emeralds. Cavanagh was at the bat, Titcher sent in a swift one. Cavanagh struck at the ball with all his might. The ball caught him fairly over the heart. He dropped his bat and began to rub the spot where the ball had struck him. Then he started for first base. When within 10 feet of the base he staggered and fell. He was carried to a bench unconscious and died in two minutes. Titcher was greatly affected by the accident. He was paroled by the chief of police.

Special Commissioner Cunningham's ruling that Chris Von der Ahe, in his conspiracy suit against F. De Haas Robison, Edward A. Becker and others, members of the National League and American Association, did not state sufficient facts in his petition to constitute a cause of action, was affirmed by Judge Withrow on May 2, at St. Louis, Mo. If Von der Ahe fails to amend his petition within ten days he will be thrown out of court.

The St. Paul and Milwaukee teams, of the Western League, were not scheduled for a double header at St. Paul, Minn., May 8, but they came pretty nearly working one off, as it required seventeen innings before a result was reached, St. Paul winning by 5 to 4.

BRILLIANT OPENING IN KENTUCKY.

Manuel, the Favorite, Taral Up, Captures the Kentucky Derby Easily.

Before one of the largest crowds that ever visited the course at Louisville, Ky., on Derby Day, witnessed A. H. & D. H. Morris' son of good old Bob Miles, Manuel, the ruling favorite, carry off this classic event on May 4, the opening day of the Spring meeting. There were but five starters, and the race was not one to be long remembered, as the horses finished according to class, the favorite, handled by Fred Taral, having the race well in hand from the start, and going to the front at the turn into the stretch, after His Lordship, the previous leader, and Fontainebleu had shot their bolts, and thereafter the event was a procession, Manuel winning handily by a length and a half, in time that was consideraly slower than he was capable of showing. 'Cyclists and the Brooklyn Bridge.

The example of the Good Roads Association, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in adopting resolutions urging the construction of a 'cycle path across the Brooklyn bridge has been followed by the executive committee of the New York State Division of the L. A. W., who, on May 3, passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The enormous traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge has become a menace to 'cyclists who attempt to ride across the bridge on the roadway, and

Whereas, Wheelmen and women riding across the bridge do so daily at the peril of their lives; therefore be it

Resolved, That the executive committee of the New York State Division of the League of American Wheelmen call upon the authorities having the requisite jurisdiction to take the necessary steps to provide a 'cycle path, or other means of passage, for the citizens of Greater New York who find it necessary to daily ride across the bridge.

CHAIRMAN GERLACH, OF CHICAGO, ILL., on May 1 sent out the initial batch of registration cards in the L. A. W. to amateur racing men. In registering the amateurs this year he adopts a new system, numbering the men according to States. There will be a No. 1 in each State. The first card sent out was to William A. McCready, of Pittsburg, Pa., who sent his application to ex-Chairman Mott immediately after the National Assembly passed the amateur registration rule. His card reads: "William A. McCready, Pennsylvania, No. 1." Ed. Llewellyn, of Chicago, was the first Illinois amateur to register.

MAJOR TAYLOR, the colored phenomenon, and Eddie McDuffie, of Boston, Mass., have been matched to ride fifteen miles, motor paced, in Philadelphia, Pa., May 27, for a purse of $1,000 and a side wager of $500, the men to start from opposite sides of the track, a rolling start for the pacers and a standing start for the contestants. Should either contestant or machine meet with an accident during the first mile a fresh start is to be made.

HARRY ELKES, the Glen Falls flyer, is to attempt to lower the one mile record, 1m. 31⅗s., standing to the credit of Major Taylor. He will be paced by a petroleum tandem, and the trial will be made at the race meeting to be held at Ambrose Park, Brooklyn, N. Y., on May 20.

COMMISSIONER J. D. BELL, of the new East River bridge, is credited with the statement that there will be a wheelway built on the structure for the accommodation of devotees of the wheel in Greater New York, one of which he himself is pleased to be.

IT IS INDEED

A Terrible Murder

Of good opportunities to keep on doing the old chestnuts, when good, new stuff is within easy reach MADISON'S BUDGET No. 4 has just been issued. Here is the challenge list of contents: Ten Brand New Parodies, every one written especially for this issue, by James Madison. Here are the titles: "I Guess I'll Have to Telegraph My Baby," "'Mid the Green Fields of Virginia," "My Old New Hampshire Home," "If I Only Had a Job" (with great Eagan verse), "She Certainly Was Good to Me," "The Beef That Killed Our Men at Santiago" (to melody of "Man Who Broke the Bank," etc.), "It Ain't No Lie" (second series of Hebrew verses), "In New York at Midnight" (being a new localized version of that famous song, 'On the Bridge at Midnight"), "Let Bygones Be Bygones," "Great Tramp Parody" (to medley of "I Went to Gay Paree"). If you were willing to pay fifty dollars apiece you could not secure brighter, better or funnier parodies than the above. BUDGET No. 4 also contains: A Brilliant Original Monologue replete with stories, anecdotes, and up to date comment on the various topics of the times; also two sets of Brand New Sidewalk Conversation for two males and male and female team, respectively. Enough quick fire jokes and gags under this head to construct three first class acts from; also a refined assortment of Hebrew Gags and stories that are funny but in no way offensive. Good Hebrew comedy always brings a laugh; also a new departure in the way of Minstrel Gags, containing a clever exchange of real fun between the interlocutor and endmen; also something to fill a long felt want, or in other words a New Stump Speech, written by James Madison on the subject of "Woman," and a guaranteed mirth provoker. Performers playing in or around Greater New York will find under the head of Local Topics an avalanche of bright talk and clever comment pertaining to the merry city of Gotham. Nor would it do to forget many other meritorious features which are classified under the head of Miscellaneous. For instance, James Morton (of Morton & Revelle), the originator of rag-time words, tells in his own language just how this latest fad in coon slanging is accomplished; also a gilt edge assortment of editorials, poems, etc., etc. MADISON'S BUDGET No. 4 costs only One Dollar per copy, and remember, your money back if you are not entirely pleased. Send for the BUDGET today and the only kick you will have coming will be to kick yourself that you did not send for it sooner.

TO MANAGERS, READ AND LEARN.

May—APPLETON and ALLEN—Wm. F., who recently played the Auditorium Theatre, Norfolk, Va., saw us produce one of our domestic sketches "Quitts." We learned that after leaving here they used the entire act, and stated that we gave them permission to produce same. Such is not the case, and I ask you as a manager and a performer to uphold my rights in restraining anyone from producing an act in which man and wife separate, using two trunks and superfluous wardrobe on the stage. The idea of "Quitts" is my original, as I produced the sketch over fifteen years ago. I consider it one of our best acts, and would not like to have a hashed up version produced by others. We,

WILEY HAMILTON and RUTH WILEY,

Are the first artists to give an entire change of specialty each day in the week, thus producing six distinct sketches during one engagement. They are original, up to date and refined, as follows:

1. Light Comedy Sketch in evening dress, introducing original imitations.
2. "Quitts," a Domestic Sketch.
3. "A Gentleman of Leisure," Character Sketch.
4. "Home Rule," Domestic Sketch.
5. "Harem Scarem Swells," Character Sketch.
6. "The Moral Husband," Domestic Sketch.

Address WILEY HAMILTON, 18th week as General Mgr. of Auditorium Theatre, Norfolk, Va.

EDISON MOVING PICTURE FILMS.

Mr. Edison's Latest Discovery.

We have made a complete revolution in our printing and developing departments, employing an entirely new process for making animated film subjects.

The results surpass anything hitherto produced.

The pictures when projected show great improvements both in clearness and definition, and have that soft mellow tone which has been so long sought for, but not until now attained.
